HAS PROHIBITION INCREASED CRIME

NEGATIVE ANSWER GIVEN BY COUNCIL OF CHURCHES

The Bootlegger Is Getting Rich—Crime Increases As Drinking Slumps—The Automobile Says the Report Should Bear a Greater Responsibility Than the Hip Flask For Present Moral Conditions Among the Young.

An exhaustive discussion of the effect of prohibition on crime, conditions in settlement neighborhoods, drug addiction, morals of the young and respect for law in general was made public Tuesday night by the research and education department of the Federal Council of Churches as a third section of its special report on the social consequences of prohibition laws.

While pointing out that a lack of complete data makes definite conclusions impossible, the report made these assertions:

The tendency of young people of the present day to depart from conventional rules of behavior cannot be laid entirely at the door of prohibition but "the fact that prohibition has had no more decisive effect in heightening their moral tone gives food for earnest thought."

Crime statistics indicate a rapid increase in violation of law, chiefly of the misdemeanor class, but it is "gratuitous" to blame prohibition, and "all that can be asserted is that prohibition has thus far not prevented an increase in such offenses."

Available information indicates that in settlement neighborhoods there is less drinking and family life has improved under prohibition but that the law nevertheless is widely violated and "the bootlegger is getting rich."

Assertions that prohibition has tended to increase the use of drugs lack definite proof and would appear to be untrue.

"The general impression that respect for law is declining leads many ardent supporters of prohibition to believe that its foes are undermining all citizenship, while the latter assert very positively that prohibition has destroyed respect for all law. Fortunately, neither contention is fully supported by facts. The best authorities in psychology and education agree that a person's attitude toward law and government is not determined with reference to a single statute, and that hostility toward one law does not carry over into the whole field of the citizen's responsibility."

"The attitude of people toward their government, altho it often gives cause for concern, rests upon a broader basis than the popularity of a single law. Everyone takes some laws more seriously than others and necessarily so. All laws have not the same importance and some have great or social sanction than others. For this reason it would seem to be a mistake to rest the appeal for observance of prohibition laws merely upon the general duty to 'obey the law.' Rather an attitude of intelligent sympathy toward the law itself must be built up if it is to be generally observed."

In discussing effects of prohibition on crime the report declared that crime statistics are "notoriously inaccurate" and suggested that trends in crime conditions apparently have their basis in forces which long have been operative and are fairly independent of liquor laws."

The automobile, said the report, should bear a greater responsibility than the hip flask for present moral conditions among the young.

"Reports of school administration officials and of teachers who have made studies of moral problems in the schools give little support to the theory that prohibition is in itself a cause of moral breakdown." It continued. "It may perhaps just as truly be said that it does not appear to be a great asset. Certainly nonobservance of the law by parents has a rather tragic effect on boys and girls. "In colleges, undoubtedly, some alarming conditions have developed. Even in conservative denominational college a student has been known to earn his way thru school by bootlegging. The evidence, however, seems to indicate a favorable trend at the present time; at least this is the opinion of nearly all the college deans consulted, and it receives some measure of support from other sources."

DISOBEDIENCE COSTLY TO FORD LOSS $5,000,000

The Detroit Free Press of Wednesday morning says that an effort of employees at the Ford Motor Co., to improve upon methods of Henry Ford caused a delay of two weeks in the production of the new model automobiles of the company. The story says Henry Ford previously insisted that all parts be worked out in wood before being made into metal to insure perfect fitting.

This time, according to the story, several Ford employees, without consulting anyone, decided to work direct from the blueprints and for this reason it was impossible to fit together machines shipped to Ford assembly plants thruout the country.

Officials of the Ford Co., it is stated refuse to comment on an article Tuesday in the Wall Street Journal asserting that the two weeks' delay had cost the company $5,000,000. It was denied there had been any wholesale dismissal of employees as a result of the error and also that the error had resulted from the activity of paid mechanics placed in the Ford Co., plants by a rival motor car company.

Columbus — Professor Henry C. Lord, 59, who for 21 years has been director of the Emerson McMillen observatory at Ohio State university died Tuesday night at the McMillen sanitarium after a two years illness.

Dayton, — Dick Parrish, 50, a high-way laborer, who was fatally injured Tuesday when his companion, John Fox, 60 was crushed to death, died a few hours later. They were working on a road over the Englewood dam and a heavy truck with a trailer passed. The trailer broke away from the truck and caught both men. Both lived at Little York.

Youngstown — In the interest of economy, the 25 new girl clerks for the City Hall here will be selected from the "non-powdering and non-rouging" class, it was announced today. Officials claim that hours are wasted in the course of a month by girls who, every few minutes, dash up to the office mirrors for a dab of powder or a slap of rouge.

TAMMANY RIDES TO POPULARITY DEFEATS HYLAN

Democratic Nominate State
Sen. Walker, Republicans
—Frank D. Waterman.

State Senator James J. Walker of New York, overwhelmed Mayor Hylan Tuesday in the Democratic primary election of a mayoralty candidate, and Tammany Hall, under the leadership of Governor Al. Smith and George W. Olvany, won a signal victory.

Walker's majority was estimated early Tuesday evening at 90,000, with the possibility indicated that this would ultimately exceed the 100,000 which his managers prophesied for him.

The whole Tammany ticket was swept to victory over the Hylan lineup.

Walker and his companions on the ticket carried Manhattan, the Bronx and Brooklyn.

Indications were than Hylan would prevail in Queens and Richmond, but with majorities entirely too small to make an impression on the votes rolled up elsewhere by the Tammany ticket.

The victory for the head of the Tammany ticket carried with it the nomination of Gen. Charles W. Berry Tammany candidate for controller and Justice Jos. V. McGee, Tammany candidate for president of the board of aldermen.

They defeated their opponents on the Hylan ticket, William H. Edwards and Willis A. Coakley by margins almost as great as Walker.

G. O. P. Contest Walkaway.

The Republican contest proved a walkaway for Frank D. Waterman, pen manufacturer, the regular organization candidate. He was leading William M. Bennett and John J. Lyons insurgent candidates, by an 8 to 1 basis. The Republican contest was overshadowed by the fight among the Democrats. The Republican vote was tabulated slowly as the Democratic votes were counted first.

Governor Smith's old East Side district, under the shadow of Brooklyn bridge, gave Senator Walker one of the biggest majorities of any district in the city. The vote was; Walker 302; Hylan, 15.

Senator Walker apparently carried with him the rest of the Tammany ticket, including General Charles W. Berry for comptroller and Joseph V. McKee for president of the board of aldermen.

William H. (Big Bill) Edwards, former Princeton football star, who was Mayor Hylan's candidate for comptroller, made a better run than some of his colleagues.

LA FOLLETTE WINS EASILY IN WISCONSIN

Rode in on Dead Father's Popularity, Election Will be Held Sept. 29.

Robert M. La Follette Jr., continued in the footsteps of his late father Tuesday, when he won the Republican nomination for the U. S. senatorship. His victory came in a decisive manner against three other Republican candidates. He will go into the final election September 29.

From the first returns, young Bob, as he is known thru the country, displayed vote getting tendencies as good, if not better than his father who was known to hold the Wisconsin vote in the hollow of his hand.

Wins City and County.

In the city and in the county alike, he piled up his majority over his three Republican opponents.

True to their Coolidge Republican tendencies the southeastern Wisconsin counties repudiated La Follette on the strength of almost complete returns, which show a heavy vote in favor of Roy P. Wilcox, Coolidge Republican candidate. Kenosha county was running two to one in his favor. Walworth and Rock counties were also giving him a majority, while Racine county completely fell from grace by returning La Follette 1,000 votes advantage.

Calumet county, across the lake from Oshkosh, the home of the anti-La Follette movement, at this election gave tendencies of turning away from the youthful candidate by dividing its vote almost equally. The other 66 counties in the state were for La-Follette without reservation.

Analysis of the returns with more than half of the precincts reported shows Wilcox running more than two to one behind La Follette. Daniel Woodward, who has the Ku Klux Klan indorsement, was the surprise of the race, holding to third place and plying along about two to one behind Wilcox. Francis E. McGovern, at one time a good-enough vote getter to be elected governor of the state on two occasions, was two to one behind Woodward and had conceded the nomination of La Follette.

In the Democratic race William George Bruce of Milwaukee, nominated at the regular Democratic convention, was so far ahead of Judge Charles B. Rogers of Fort Atkinson, running on stickers, that it was considered no contest.

ACCEPTING DEPOSITS WITHOUT AUTHORITY

Menace, Says Scott—State Bank Superintendent Says Money of Public Will Be Protected By His Department—Investors are Warned.

Columbus, Sept. 14.—Following several conferences with Attorney General Crabbe, H. E. Scott, state superintendent of banks, today opened fire upon individuals and corporations in Ohio, not under supervision of the banking laws, which are accepting money from the public in return for certificates of indebtedness, interest bearing notes, or other evidence of debt.

At the same time, Mr. Scott warned the public against buying such evidences of debt, because of the risk involved.

"It recently came to our attention," Mr. Scott said, "that several corporations, engaged in the business of lending money upon chattel or wage security, or upon second mortgages, also were soliciting money from the public to use in its operations and were issuing, in receipt for its deposit with them, certificates of indebtedness, interest bearing notes, or other evidences of debt. The department obtained several such certificates, and the advertising matter issued by these concerns, and submitted the entire proposition to the Attorney General. He ruled that such practice constitutes accepting deposits in violation of the banking law.

"Not authorized to do a banking business, not organized nor conducted under the safeguards which the law throws about the banking business in this state, these concerns have been operating a bank. The law on this point is very clear. The only institutions authorized by Ohio law to accept deposits are banks, building and loan associations and title guaranty and trust companies. Any other concern which offers to accept your money, pay you interest, and give you back your principal, either upon demand, upon notice or at a certain future time, is engaging in the banking business without authority and is subject to heavy penalty."

Mr. Scott pointed out that the danger to the public lies in the fact that these corporations are not subject to periodical state examination and supervision; that there is no state authority to supervise their investments and their handling of their funds, so that they take many risks which the authorized institutions of deposit cannot and would not do. Because of the chances they take, they charge high rates of interest upon the money they lend, and promise attractive returns upon money left upon deposit with them.

"It's the old, old story that has been told so often," said Mr. Scott. "When any company offers to pay you a high return upon your money, higher than you can get from investment in safe, sound securities, or from savings deposits, the element of risk and speculation always is present. It is impossible for any company to pay these high returns, and, at the same time, guarantee that it will give you back your principal whenever you want or need it."

The state banking department is anxious to learn of the activities of companies making such offers and accepting money in this way, Mr. Scott asserted. Wherever they are found, they will be compelled to stop the practice.

During the month there were 19,129 persons injured, compared with 17,632 in July.

Payments to the workmen's compensation fund in August totaled $1,496,955.19, while expenditures amounted to $1,046,134.27, leaving a gross balance of $447,821.21. 99 per cent of which is pledged for payment of approved claims.

FAMILY REUNIONS

One of the most thoroughly delightful of the summer reunions and bringing together nearly seventy members of the James and Coover families connection, was entertained by Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Holdren at their handsome country place Friday. The reunion was in honor of Mrs. Daisy James Wade and daughter, Miss Elizabeth, of Emporia, Kansas, who have been guests at the Holdren home for several days, enroute to New York City, where Miss Wade is in charge of the Columbia University lunch rooms. Owing to the brevity of their stay which forbade much visiting in a large circle of relatives Mr. and Mrs. Holdren conceived the happy idea of assembling the family for a day of visiting and feasting.

The fine old grove in front of the home was ideal for the gathering, its big shady trees and refreshing breezes making it the coolest place in the county—under the trees, long tables were prettily decorated with bright hued fall flowers for the dinner served cafeteria fashion. There were huge platters of fried chicken, all kinds of salads, sandwiches, home baked cakes and all manner of eatables taken from the hamper and supplemented by the entertainers with ice cream, punch, ice tea, and everything to be thought of in such generous quantities that there was enough left for another reunion.

The interesting honor guests were the center of an afternoon of pleasureable sociability, promoted in every way by Mr. and Mrs. Holdren, their daughter, Mrs. Robert Rodgers and Miss Ruby Lee and son, Mr. Frank Holdren and wife.

Rev. Clifford, of Bourneville, made a spicy little talk, enthusiastic in its uniting of family interests. In addition to the honor guests those participating were: Dr. and Mrs. Robert Jones, son, Robert, of Greenfield; Mrs. Margaret A. James, of Daytona, Fla.; Mr. and Mrs. Ned James, Miss Eva James, Mr. and Mrs. Irvin Dunlap and daughter, of Greenfield; Mr. and Mrs. Milton James, Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Putnam, Frankfort; Mrs. Belle Putnam, of Austin; Mrs. Dudley Briggs, Mr. William Briggs, Mayor W. Holdren, Mrs. Arizona Holdren and daughter, Mrs. Charles Morgan, Mrs. Frank James, Mr. Robert James, Miss Ida Post, Miss Ella Taylor, Miss Florence Ustick and Mr. D. Miller, of this city.

The country home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles M. Clifton, on the White road, near New Holland, was hospitably thrown open, Friday, for a reunion of former residents of that vicinity.

The affair brought together a number of old friends, whose intimacy was interrupted by the removal to other cities of many, and especially complimented Mrs. John D. Fidler and daughter, Miss Eleanor, of St. Louis, and Mrs. Herbert D. Martin, of Des Moines, Ia. The guests came from all of the surrounding cities and brought a delicious basket dinner that was spread in the dining room and served cafeteria style. Pretty bouquets of fall flowers were used in decoration throughout the home. Mrs. Clifton was assisted in the elaborate preparations by Mrs. A. F. Kaler, of New Holland, and Miss Elizabeth May, of Washington, D. C.

Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. John D. Fidler and daughter, Miss Eleanor, of St. Louis; Mrs. Herbert D. Martin, of Des Moines, Ia.; Mr. and Mrs. John H. Dunlap and son, John Jr., of Williamsport; Mr. and Mrs.

Her Recognition

Small Elizabeth and her mother were walking down the street when they saw an urchin approaching them. Elizabeth stuck out her tongue. When they had gone on, her mother inquired "Why did you stick out your tongue at that little boy we just passed." There was a pause while Elizabeth considered. "Why?" she replied, at length. "Why, mother, to show him I recognized him!"

HUGE INCREASE IN TAXES SINCE 1914
United States Pays $7,716,000,000 Annually.

New York.—The immense financial burden imposed upon the principal nations associated during the World war against the central powers is analyzed in a comparative study of taxation in the allied countries made by the national industrial conference board.

Taxation in the United States nominally has more than trebled since prewar days. The total amount of local, state and federal taxes levied in the fiscal year 1923-24 amounted to $7,716,000,000, as compared with $2,194,000,000 in 1913-14. Taking into account the decrease of purchasing power of the dollar during the war decade, this represents an actual increase in the tax burden of two and a quarter times that of the last prewar year.

Per Capita Tax Doubled.

Per capita taxation more than doubled in both the United States and Great Britain. But Great Britain in 1924, six years after the signing of the armistice, led all allied countries both in amount of taxes levied per head of population and in the proportion of total national income diverted into channels of governmental expenditures. France, Italy, Belgium and the United States follow in order, according to the burdensomeness which their respective tax systems imposed upon their people as measured by the relation of taxes to national income.

British per capita taxes, amounting to $27.11 in the fiscal year 1913-14, had risen to $58.40 in 1923-24, in terms of 1913 purchasing power; per capita taxes in the United States, figured on the same basis, increased from $22.73 in 1913-14 to $45.27 in 1923-24; in France, from $24.70 to $29.53; in Belgium, from $11.39 to $17.76; in Italy the per capita tax remained the same, $14.28, taking into account the lower purchasing power of the 1924 currency. Comparative figures for Germany are not available.

Increased Relative to Income.

In both the United States and Great Britain taxation in proportion to national income approximately doubled, in Belgium more than doubled since prewar days.

While taxation in the United States and Great Britain increased in about the same proportion, and these two countries levy the highest per capita taxes among the allied nations, the greater material wealth and productivity of the American nation make its tax burden comparatively lighter than that borne by any of the European allied countries. Net revenues in the United States, moreover, are spent largely for universal education, good roads, public buildings, parks and other reinvestment of the taxpayers' money, the conference board analysis indicates, while the proceeds of taxation in Europe are to a great extent absorbed in paying the cost of past wars.

TREASURES IN INDIAN GRAVES
Plunder Taken From Panama's Old Cemeteries.

Perhaps the most interesting cemeteries in the world, those of an ancient Indian race of which little is known, are situated near Bugaba, Chiriqui, Panama. Formerly the graves covered a vast territory, but many have been opened and plundered.

In 1857 a Spaniard who was digging on his plantation in Panama unearthed a grave that contained some gold ornaments. He continued to dig and gathered a fortune before his secret became known. Then everyone began to hunt for gold and thousands upon thousands of graves were destroyed and countless priceless relics were broken and lost to archeologists.

An idea of the number of graves may be had from the account of Gen. Thomas F. Meagher, who crossed the isthmus from David to Bocas del Toro, 50 years ago. He writes: "A mile outside of Dolega the party stopped at the house of Robert Soles, the discoverer of the golden relics in the Indian graves of Chiriqui. All the way from David we had ridden through thousands of these ransacked graves, and in every direction for leagues and leagues . . . we might have seen tens of thousands more."

Between 1858 and 1868 thousands of pounds' worth of gold ornaments were shipped to the Bank of England and melted for bullion, and thousands of beautiful pottery vases were broken and covered the ground on the site of the graves. They were of many sizes, shapes and designs, some plain, and some fancifully decorated with quaint and grotesque human figures, some painted in patterns, and some molded in relief. A number had three legs that were hollow and contained little balls that rattled when the vessel was handled. In those vases gold ornaments were frequently found, and it is supposed that the loose balls in the legs were to scare away evil spirits.

Few implements of stone are found in the graves, except a few celts, or grooved axes of stone, a few long knives, and once in a long while an arrow head. Fine metates, or mortars of stone, are sometimes found, carved in the shape of a jaguar or a frog or an armadillo. Stone molds in which some of the gold ornaments were made, and also goldsmith's tools of stone, found in the graves, show the people to have been far advanced in civilization.—Youth's Companion.

YOUTH

MIDDLE age is less optimistic than youth, less courageous, and meets pain and dangers and discomforts with less fortitude.

My neighbor, Harris, shuffled into the office a day or two ago when the thermometer was registering 96 in the shade and in the sun had pushed its way through the top of the tube. He was mopping a damp brow, breathing heavily, and presenting a general appearance of ill temper and dissatisfaction.

"Well, who's sold you a gold brick this time?" I asked him.

"I'm all knocked out today," he replied. "It was so blasted hot last night that I couldn't sleep a wink, and I'll be no good all day."

"The trouble with you, Harris," I said, "is that you're growing old." I've known Harris since he was a boy of ten on the farm. He slept then in the unplastered attic just under the roof. The roof had but one little window in it, and this window gave no ventilation to the room but served only as a means of entrance of the sun's pitiless rays that beat on the roof throughout the long August days and rendered the room a veritable furnace at night. And yet Harris scarcely noticed the heat then. He had youth; he was tired and groggy with sleep when he mounted to his bed in the attic, and he dropped off almost the moment he touched the hot sheets and slept until he was awakened in the morning by his mother's voice.

Now he has a cold shower before going to his pleasant bed in his sleeping porch. He lives under the most favorable conditions, but a little rise in the thermometer puts him out of sorts for an entire day.

I visited Crane in the hospital the other day. He is middle aged. He has had some minor surgery done on him—an ingrowing toe nail taken off or a boil lanced or something of that sort. He is as gloomy as a grave yard, and as irritable as a teething child. All his plans for the summer have been upset, and the little pain and discomfort he has suffered has put him on "low." It was depressing to talk to him.

And then I remembered the letter I had from Blum. Blum was at the front at the beginning of the German drive. He met rain and mud and vermin with a cheerful laugh; he faced a storm of bullets and blood, and when he wrote the letter he was lying in a hospital severely wounded.

"Here I am 'sitting on the world,'" said the boys put it," he wrote. "Nice white enameled bed, clean white sheets, white blankets and all. Good food; nothing to do but eat and sleep. Pretty soft."

"Don't have any worry about me; I'm in clover and having a good rest. I'm all right; I'm eating like a horse and kicking because they don't give me enough."

"Love and good luck to everybody." Oh, youth, youth!

Writer Sees Virtue in Incompatibility

"John and I get on splendidly," said Joan. "We never agree, you see, and by downright arguments about totally impersonal things we find an outlet for all the petty grievances and impatiences of every-day life. And so, because we lack what is commonly described as 'having lots in common,' we always have something to talk about, something to discuss from different angles without necessarily touching upon purely personal affairs. It is so good for both of us; we are thoroughly happy."

Thus a married friend of mine, a wife of four years' standing, over whose marriage to a man some years her senior and of completely different habits and tastes wise people had shaken despondent heads, Marjory Swift comments, in the Washington Post.

Is total compatibility so utterly necessary for happily married life as is commonly thought? Rather is it not possible that by their very difference each partner can supply what the other lacks, the combination making a perfect companionship?

My friend's experience leads me to decide that total incompatibility, as recognized by the vast majority, is the most important ingredient for the success of that subtle compound marriage. With it that stimulation which only intelligent disagreement with, and criticism of, one's fundamental views and ideas can supply, will ever be present; the necessity for remaining oneself, for upholding one's own ideals, will ever spur one on a vigorous defense of those ideals.

Thus one would never grow old. Always stimulated, always on the defensive, one's brain would laugh at the passage of the years, would find it impossible, because of its activity, to collect clogging rust.

And think of the joy of living with someone who, day in, day out, will not, cannot, say, "Yes, dear, I quite agree; you are perfectly right." How terribly corroding it must be to experience daily acquiescence, however futile one's ideas!

Miami's Building Record

More houses per capita were erected in Miami, Fla., last year than in any city in the country. An average of one dwelling for every five families is the record for the southern city. Figures collected by the United States Labor department show 2,248.9 families provided for to every 10,000 of population, which is referred to by the Washington experts as a phenomenal ratio of house construction. For the three years prior to 1924 Long Beach on the California coast held the honor of being the most ambitious home-building center in the country.

The time is passed when the measure of the value of a memorial is quantity. I hope the time has come when that measure is quality. I care not whether the material be marble or granite, its future will be measured by the character of the design. It is quality that has preserved for us the finest examples in painting and sculpture. It is quality that will stamp our imprint upon cemeteries of the future. Simplicity, correct lines and proportions and proper ornamentation are the real fundamentals. A design that is right, material that is lasting and perfect workmanship, spells success for the future of this industry and the beautification of the cemetery. ACCEPTING DEPOSITS WITHOUT AUTHORITY

Menace, Says Scott—State Bank Superintendent Says Money of Public Will Be Protected By His Department—Investors are Warned.

Columbus, Sept. 14.—Following several conferences with Attorney General Crabbe, H. E. Scott, state superintendent of banks, today opened fire upon individuals and corporations in Ohio, not under supervision of the banking laws, which are accepting money from the public in return for certificates of indebtedness, interest bearing notes, or other evidence of debt.

At the same time, Mr. Scott warned the public against buying such evidences of debt, because of the risk involved.

"It recently came to our attention," Mr. Scott said, "that several corporations, engaged in the business of lending money upon chattel or wage security, or upon second mortgages, also were soliciting money from the public to use in its operations and were issuing, in receipt for its deposit with them, certificates of indebtedness, interest bearing notes, or other evidences of debt. The department obtained several such certificates, and the advertising matter issued by these concerns, and submitted the entire proposition to the Attorney General. He ruled that such practice constitutes accepting deposits in violation of the banking law.

"Not authorized to do a banking business, not organized nor conducted under the safeguards which the law throws about the banking business in this state, these concerns have been operating a bank. The law on this point is very clear. The only institutions authorized by Ohio law to accept deposits are banks, building and loan associations and title guaranty and trust companies. Any other concern which offers to accept your money, pay you interest, and give you back your principal, either upon demand, upon notice or at a certain future time, is engaging in the banking business without authority and is subject to heavy penalty."

Mr. Scott pointed out that the danger to the public lies in the fact that these corporations are not subject to periodical state examination and supervision; that there is no state authority to supervise their investments and their handling of their funds, so that they take many risks which the authorized institutions of deposit cannot and would not do. Because of the chances they take, they charge high rates of interest upon the money they lend, and promise attractive returns upon money left upon deposit with them.

"It's the old, old story that has been told so often," said Mr. Scott. "When any company offers to pay you a high return upon your money, higher than you can get from investment in safe, sound securities, or from savings deposits, the element of risk and speculation always is present. It is impossible for any company to pay these high returns, and, at the same time, guarantee that it will give you back your principal whenever you want or need it."

The state banking department is anxious to learn of the activities of companies making such offers and accepting money in this way, Mr. Scott asserted. Wherever they are found, they will be compelled to stop the practice.

ACCIDENT TOLL GROWS LARGER

In Ohio During August—Lives of 78 Lost—Injured Total 19,129.

Columbus, Sept. 14.—Accidents in Ohio Industries took a toll of 78 lives in August, according to a report made public today by the State Department of Industrial Relations. This was an increase of seven over July.

During the month there were 19,129 persons injured, compared with 17,632 in July.

Payments to the workmen's compensation fund in August totaled $1,496,955.19, while expenditures amounted to $1,046,134.27, leaving a gross balance of $47,731.216.99 per cent of which is pledged for payment of approved claims.

There were 30,894 claims heard by the Industrial Commission, the largest number which ever came before that body in a month.

BIRTHDAY SURPRISE

In honor of her husband's birthday anniversary Mrs. Chas. L. Pierce delightfully entertained with a surprise party Sunday, at their home on North Columbus street.

Covers were laid for Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Pierce and Robert Pierce, of Oakland; Rev. and Mrs. G. W. Thompson and family of Millersport; Mr. and Mrs. Russell Creager and family, of Stoutsville; Miss Carrie Pierce, of Columbus, and Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Pierce.—Lancaster Eagle.

FAMILY REUNIONS

One of the most thoroughly delightful of the summer reunions and bringing together nearly seventy members of the James and Coover families connection, was entertained by Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Holdren at their handsome country place Friday. The reunion was in honor of Mrs. Daisy James Wade and daughter, Miss Elizabeth, of Emporia, Kansas, who have been guests at the Holdren home for several days, enroute to New York City, where Miss Wade is in charge of the Columbia University lunch rooms. Owing to the brevity of their stay which forbade much visiting in a large circle of relatives Mr. and Mrs. Holdren conceived the happy idea of assembling the family for a day of visiting and feasting.

The fine old grove in front of the home was ideal for the gathering, its big shady trees and refreshing breezes making it the coolest place in the county—under the trees, long tables were prettily decorated with bright hued fall flowers for the dinner served cafeteria fashion. There were huge platters of fried chicken, all kinds of salads, sandwiches, home baked cakes and all manner of eatables taken from the hamper and supplemented by the entertainers with ice cream, punch, ice tea, and everything to be thought of in such generous quantities that there was enough left for another reunion.

The interesting honor guests were the center of an afternoon of pleasurable sociability, promoted in every way by Mr. and Mrs. Holdren, their daughter, Mrs. Robert Rodgers and Miss Ruby Lee and son, Mr. Frank Holdren and wife.

Rev. Clifford, of Bourneville, made a spicy little talk, enthusiastic in its uniting of family interests. In addition to the honor guests those participating were: Dr. and Mrs. Robert Jones, son, Robert, of Greenfield; Mrs. Margaret A. James, of Daytona, Fla.; Mr. and Mrs. Ned James, Miss Eva James, Mr. and Mrs. Irvin Dunlap and daughter, of Greenfield; Mr. and Mrs. Milton James, Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Putnam, Frankfort; Mrs. Belle Putnam, of Austin; Mrs. Dudley Briggs, Mr. Mr. William Briggs, Mayor W. K. Briggs, Miss Lillie Briggs, Mrs. Floyd James and daughter, Betty; Mr. Stroud Briggs, Mrs. Percy May, of New Holland; Rev. and Mrs. James Clifford, Mr. G. S. Coover, Mrs. Jessie Vore and Miss Myrtle Coover, of Bourneville; Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Holdren, Mrs. Arizona Holdren and daughter, Mrs. Charles Morgan, Mrs. Frank James, Mr. Robert James, Miss Ida Post, Miss Ella Taylor, Miss Florence Ustick and Mr. D. Miller, of this city.

The country home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles M. Clifton, on the White road, near New Holland, was hospitably thrown open, Friday, for a reunion of former residents of that vicinity.

The affair brought together a number of old friends, whose intimacy was interrupted by the removal to other cities of many, and especially complimented Mrs. John D. Fidler and daughter, Miss Eleanor, of St. Louis, and Mrs. Herbert D. Martin, of Des Moines, Ia. The guests came from all of the surrounding cities and brought a delicious basket dinner that was spread in the dining room and served cafeteria style. Pretty bouquets of fall flowers were used in decoration throughout the home. Mrs. Clifton was assisted in the elaborate preparations by Mrs. A. F. Kaler, of New Holland, and Miss Elizabeth May, of Washington, D. C.

Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. John D. Fidler and daughter, Miss Eleanor, of St. Louis; Mrs. Herbert D. Martin, of Des Moines, Ia.; Mr. and Mrs. John H. Dunlap and son, John Jr., of Williamsport; Mr. and Mrs.

Channing Vlerebome and daughter, Miss Ann, Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. MARRIAGE

RANDLES-HAYS.

Miss Clara Ethel Randles, an employee of The Citizens' Trust & Savings Bank, of Columbus, and Mr. Alfred M. Hays, of Minneapolis, Minn., were united in marriage last Friday in Chicago. After September 16, they will be at home in Minneapolis.

Her Recognition

Small Elizabeth and her mother were walking down the street when they saw an urchin approaching them. Elizabeth stuck out her tongue. When they had gone on, her mother inquired "Why did you stick out your tongue at that little boy we just passed?" There was a pause while Elizabeth considered. "Why?" she replied, at length. "Why, mother, to show him I recognized him!"

HUGE INCREASE IN TAXES SINCE 1914

United States Pays $7,716,000,000 Annually.

ALONG LIFE'S TRAIL

By THOMAS A. CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.
(©, 1924, Western Newspaper Union.)

YOUTH

New York.—The immense financial burden imposed upon the principal nations associated during the World war against the central powers is analyzed in a comparative study of taxation in the allied countries made by the national industrial conference board.

Taxation in the United States nominally has more than trebled since pre-war days. The total amount of local, state and federal taxes levied in the fiscal year 1923-24 amounted to $7,716,000,000, as compared with $2,194,000,000 in 1913-14. Taking into account the decrease of purchasing power of the dollar during the war decade, this represents an actual increase in the tax burden of two and a quarter times that of the last prewar year.

Per Capita Tax Doubled.

Per capita taxation more than doubled in both the United States and Great Britain. But Great Britain in 1924, six years after the signing of the armistice, led all allied countries both in amount of taxes levied per head of population and in the proportion of total national income diverted into channels of governmental expenditures. France, Italy, Belgium and the United States follow in order, according to the burdensomeness which their respective tax systems imposed upon their people as measured by the relation of taxes to national income.

British per capita taxes, amounting to $27.11 in the fiscal year 1913-14, had risen to $58.40 in 1923-24, in terms of 1913 purchasing power; per capita taxes in the United States, figured on the same basis, increased from $22.73 in 1913-14 to $45.27 in 1923-24; in France, from $24.70 to $29.53; in Belgium, from $11.39 to $17.76; in Italy the per capita tax remained the same, $14.28, taking into account the lower purchasing power of the 1924 currency. Comparative figures for Germany are not available.

Increased Relative to Income.

In both the United States and Great Britain taxation in proportion to national income approximately doubled, in Belgium more than doubled since prewar days.

While taxation in the United States and Great Britain increased in about the same proportion, and these two countries levy the highest per capita taxes among the allied nations, the greater material wealth and productivity of the American nation make its tax burden comparatively lighter than that borne by any of the European allied countries. Net revenues in the United States, moreover, are spent largely for universal education, good roads, public buildings, parks and other reinvestment of the taxpayers' money, the conference board analysis indicates, while the proceeds of taxation in Europe are to a great extent absorbed in paying the cost of past wars.

TREASURES IN INDIAN GRAVES

Plunder Taken From Panama's Old Cemeteries.

Perhaps the most interesting cemeteries in the world, those of an ancient Indian race of which little is known, are situated near Bugaba, Chiriqui, Panama. Formerly the graves covered a vast territory, but many have been opened and plundered.

In 1857 a Spaniard who was digging on his plantation in Panama unearthed a grave that contained some gold ornaments. He continued to dig and gathered a fortune before his secret became known. Then everyone began to hunt for gold and thousands upon thousands of graves were destroyed and countless priceless relics were broken and lost to archeologists.

An idea of the number of graves may be had from the account of Gen. Thomas F. Meagher, who crossed the isthmus from David to Bocas del Toro, 50 years ago. He writes: "A mile outside of Dolega the party stopped at the house of Robert Soles, the discoverer of the golden relics in the Indian graves of Chiriqui. All the way from David we had ridden through thousands of these ransacked graves, and in every direction for leagues and leagues . . . we might have seen tens of thousands more."

Between 1858 and 1868 thousands of pounds' worth of gold ornaments were shipped to the Bank of England and melted for bullion, and thousands of beautiful pottery vases were broken and covered the ground on the site of the graves. They were of many sizes, shapes and designs, some plain, and some fantastically decorated with quaint and grotesque human figures, some painted in patterns, and some molded in relief. A number had three legs that were hollow and contained little balls that rattled when the vessel was handled. In those vases gold ornaments were frequently found, and it is supposed that the loose balls in the legs were to scare away evil spirits.

Few implements of stone are found in the graves, except a few celts, or grooved axes of stone, a few long knives, and once in a long while an arrow head. Fine metates, or mortars of stone, are sometimes found, carved in the shape of a jaguar or a frog or an armadillo. Stone molds in which some of the gold ornaments were made, and also goldsmith's tools of stone, found in the graves, show the people to have been far advanced in civilization.—Youth's Companion.

MIDDLE age is less optimistic than youth, less courageous, and meets pain and dangers and discomforts with less fortitude.

My neighbor, Harris, shuffled into the office a day or two ago when the thermometer was registering 96 in the shade and in the sun had pushed its way through the top of the tube. He was mopping a damp brow, breathing heavily, and presenting a general appearance of ill temper and dissatisfaction.

"Well, who's sold you a gold brick this time?" I asked him.

"I'm all knocked out today," he replied. "It was so blasted hot last night that I couldn't sleep a wink, and I'll be no good all day."

"Don't have any worry about me; I'm in clover and having a good rest. I'm all right; I'm eating like a horse and kicking because they don't give me enough.

"Love and good luck to everybody." Oh, youth, youth!

WE SAVE YOU MONEY.

The time is passed when the measure of the value of a memorial is quantity. I hope the time has come when that measure is quality. I care not whether the material be marble or granite, its future will be measured by the character of the design. It is quality that has preserved for us the finest examples in painting and sculpture. It is quality that will stamp our imprint upon cemeteries of the future. Simplicity, correct lines and proportions and proper ornamentation are the real fundamentals. A design that is right, material that is lasting and perfect workmanship, spells success for the future of this industry and the beautification of the cemetery. Will you let me help you select the memorial for your lot. Call at show room. NO AGENTS.

They were later taken to the Boggs hotel.

New Way to Purify Water

Two scientists in Paris recently dropped a bottle containing chloride of lime in a vessel of impure water. The bottle was corked tightly so that its contents could not come in contact with the water. Yet 24 hours later, when the bottle was taken out, 25 per cent of the microbes in the water had been killed. An explanation advanced is that the antiseptic gives off rays that attack microbes, just as ultra-violet rays do, says Popular Science Monthly.

SOCIAL CALENDAR

Mrs. Mack Noggle was hostess to a shower and dinner bridge Monday evening honoring her sister, Mrs. William Poor, a recent bride. Mrs. Edmund Wanner, Mrs. Walter Shapter, of Columbus and Mrs. Frank Nickalno of Boston, Massachusetts, were out of town guests.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Pearce, of near Stoutsville, entertained to dinner Sunday, Mr. and Mrs. C. O. Pearce of Columbus; Mr. and Mrs. Abner McDonald, of Pickerington, Mr. Salem Pearce of Baltimore; Mr. and Mrs. Leroy McDonald and daughters, Mildred and Pauline, of Ashville; Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Pearce and daughters, Marvene and Catherine, and Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Pearce, of Stoutsville.

The Heffner reunion held at Orchard Island, Lewiston Reservoir, on Labor day was a very interesting event. Professor Heffner, of Greenfield, Pennsylvania, gave an interesting history of the Heffner families. The president not being present the meeting was conducted by Mr. W. Heffner, of Christianburg, Ohio. The next reunion will be held at Springfield, Ohio, on the second Saturday in August.

If the initial meeting is any criterion the coming year's work of the Monday club will be both entertaining and profitable.

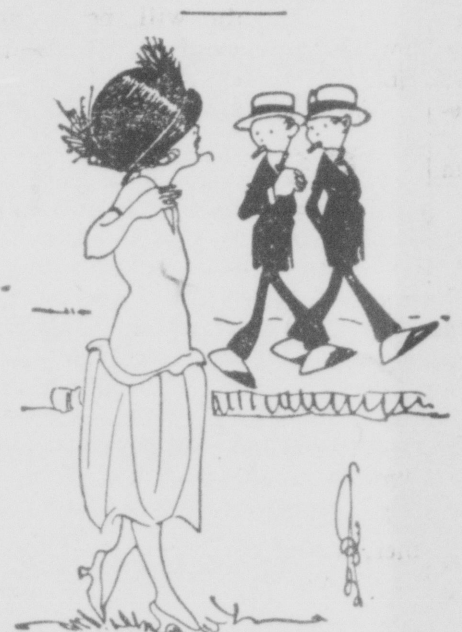

The session Monday evening, September 14th, was opened by the retiring president, Mrs. G. G. Leist, who introduced the incoming presiding officer, Mrs. Carl Ritz. Mrs. Ritz opened the year's work with an inspiring talk on the aims and purposes of the club, harking back to its beginning, thirty-five years ago, and speaking of the high ideals of its founders. This address contained much food for thought and being listened to with apparent interest by all the members present, may become the nucleus around which much good work will be accomplished for the coming year.

Mrs. Louise Crawford, chairman of the program committee, then stated briefly the work of the committee in getting out the 1925-1926 calendar. She then called on the chairmen of the various sections, each to outline the prescribed study of her section.

The evening's subject, Current Events, was then taken up under the several topics: Current Events of the Past Summer, Mrs. Brown; In Exploration, Miss Phelps; In Mexico, Mrs. Bell; In the Artist World, Miss Littleton.

Mrs. E. W. Brinker, of Chicago, formerly Miss Mary O. Smith, a charter member of the club, was a visitor.

SHENANDOAH Airship Disaster

Scenes of wreck
of U.S. Air Cruiser
in Pathe News

The fast work of the Pathe News in giving the world the screen views of the Shenandoah disaster is one of the most marvelous achievements in the history of the news camera. On the same day of the disaster pictures of the wrecked cruiser were shown in eastern cities.

So fast has been the development of camera work in giving the world its visual news that it may not be many years before the lens will be in a race with the printing press. Hardly an hour had elapsed after the news of the accident had been flashed by wire, when Pathe cameramen, driven in speed planes, were whirling away from Cleveland, Washington, Cincinnati and New York to the

ROSH HASHANAH THE NEW YEARS OF ISRAELITES

Will be Observed by Believers
of the Jewish Faith Saturday,
Sept. 19.

High holiday services will be observed in Temple Israel, Columbus, New Year's evening at 8 o'clock, Friday, September 18, and New Year's morning at 10 o'clock, Saturday, September 19.

The day is known as Rosh Hashanah, which marks the beginning of the year, 5686, on the Hebrew calendar.

Orthodox Jews customarily observe two days, but the general observance extends from sunset Friday until sunset on Saturday. The event marks the anniversary of the creation, supposedly 5685 years ago.

It is set aside as a day of self-examination and introspection and is one of the holiest days in the religious calendar. The symbolical "blowing of the trumpet" simulates the arousing of the individual to a better life during the coming year than in the year preceding. The day of atonement, which follows on September 29, marks the real conclusion of the ceremony. The first holiday is for the purpose of judging oneself and the second for atoning and repenting for shortcomings and misdeeds, according to the religious custom.

OHIO FARM FAMILIES SPEND LESS

For School Advancement on the Average—Than Other Three States.

Columbus, Sept. 15. (UP). — Ohio farm families spend less for education and general advancement than three other widely separated states now being studied by the federal department of agriculture.

The report, just obtained by Ohio State university, compares Ohio with Connecticut, Alabama and Iowa.

"Most farm women attempt to stretch their housekeeping dollars as far as possible. Many farm families fail to get the quantity of vegetables and fruits that could be had from the farm at low cost compared with the market prices of these products, the report said.

"Savings are often possible thru more efficient use of fuel and household supplies. Sometimes waste in the use of the automobile and excessive operation costs can be lessened."

Expenditures for education and "advancement" are desirable, but money should not be spent without consideration merely because the purpose is regarded as educational or spiritual, the report continued.

The average annual expenditure of farm families in Ohio was found to be $1,540. Expenditure for advancement averaged $81 per family, or 5.4 per cent of the total value of goods consumed.

A woman recently wished to dispose of a mah-jongg set of which she had grown tired, and asked a colored porter in her employ:

"Do you play mah-jongg?"

"What's that?"

"Oh, that's a game you play with little ivory blocks."

"Oh, yes, I play that," exclaimed the porter. "But why don't you say what you mean?"—Chelsea Record.

Ignorant of One Thing

Two friends were having an indignation meeting of their own. Both had suffered domestic strife and now they were comparing notes.

"Aren't women the limit?" growled the first. "We husbands don't know anything at all and our wives know everything."

"Well," said his companion in misery, reluctantly, "there's one thing my wife admits she doesn't know."

"What on earth is that?"

"Why she married me."

THEIR BABY DEAD.

The funeral services were held at the Methodist church at Darbyville Thursday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock. Rev. Cross will officiate. Interment in Darbyville cemetery.

PICKAWAY CO.
W. C. T. U. MEETS
IN THIS CITY

Held in This City Last Week
Officers Elected for the Ensuing Year.

The 35th annual convention of the Pickaway county W. C. T. U. met at Circleville in the M. E. church on Friday, September 11. Mrs. Lucy B. Price president of the county presided. Song service was conducted by County Musical Director Mrs. Alma Boor.

Devotional by Mrs. Mary S. Rife. Mrs. Lulu Marion, the newly elected president of Circleville Union, extended greetings and a cordial welcome to all. Miss Mary Harpster, of Salem Union, responded in behalf of the Unions.

Mrs. Adda Prushing, corresponding secretary read the report for the year, which showed gains in several departments. This being young people's and children's year, special effort was put forth to promote the work among them. Pickaway county feels proud of the fact that Miss Violet Ginder, of Darbyville, won the first state prize of $10, in the Scientific Temperance Essay contest.

Mrs. Bessie Long reported for the Young People's work.

Mrs. May Crites L. T. L. secretary gave a fine report of her work. She reported 119 children in the four L. T. L. organizations.

Mrs. Florence D. Richards, state president made the address and everyone was glad to have an opportunity of listening to her wonderful talk. Will only mention a few of the things she wanted us to remember. The slogan for this year being children's year is "Safeguard Our Future." "Mothers take your children to the meetings, talk to them, train them from infancy for prohibition and law enforcement. The saloons today can not hurt men as they did in the past, but men hunt the liquor and every person elected to office should be men or women who will enforce our laws, and if they fail, report to the federal officers.

Women are no account unless they work, let each one have a vision and die in the harness.

Wanted — 1,000,000 children and good leaders to train them. "Save the children and we have saved the nation for the future."

The W. C. T. U. has a greater work to do now than ever before. They are going to keep on until every bootlegger has free transportation to Atlanta, Georgia.

A very touching memorial for our nine departed sisters was conducted by Miss Mary Porter.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Mrs. Lucy B. Price, Circleville; vice president, Miss Mary Porter, Circleville; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Adda Prushing, Ashville; treasurer, Mrs. Abbie Gussman, Circleville; recording secretary, Miss Drusie Heiskell. Miss Heiskell is a Crusader and she received 68 of the 70 votes cast.

The directors of the different departments gave their reports, each one urged the Unions to get reports in early as possible.

Noontide prayer was voiced by Mrs. Mary Dunlap.

Box lunch, with ice cream and coffee was served by the Circleville Union at noon.

County executive meeting was held at 1 o'clock and directors of different departments selected.

Mrs. Elizabeth Wright conducted the devotionals. We were then favored with vocal solos by Mrs. Fannie Greeno and Mrs. Alma Boor. Thus ended a very successful convention and every woman went home filled with enthusiasm and with a determination to do more and better work during the coming year.

The congregation sang "Blest Be the Tie That Binds," followed by prayer by Rev. Mr. Johnson.

Water Power in Africa

If the world has final recourse in water power to the exclusion of other energy Africa will be the seat of empire. According to the best judgment of engineers, more than half of the potential energy of this old earth's water resources are lodged in the dark continent. There may yet be a cry of Africa for the Africans.—Los Angeles Times.

Old Town Advances

The oldest town on the North American mainland is Truxillo in Central America. It was discovered by Columbus in 1502 and now its historic streets are illuminated at night by modern electric street lighting units. Electricity is brought to Truxillo by a special 13,200-volt transmission line 12 miles long.

OPEN HEARINGS IS FAVORED BY THE PRESIDENT

Aircraft Investigation and
Inquiry Will Not be Held
Behind Closed Doors.

A policy of open hearings in the impending aircraft investigation in Washington, is favored by President Coolidge, who sees no reason why the work of his special board should not be conducted in public.

The president, who has decided to give the board a free hand in determining its procedure and summoning witnesses, feels that the public is entitled to full knowledge of its activities, except perhaps, when it goes into confidential plans for national defense.

Secretary Davis, of the war department Tuesday expressed the opinion that many persons were prone to accept at face value the charges of "incompetency and inefficiency" made by Colonel Mitchell, and that for this reason he welcomed the investigation.

Secretary Wilbur also took occasion Tuesday to reiterate his endorsement of the coming inquiry and express the willingness of the navy department to cooperate to the fullest extent. During the day, he received a call from Rear Admiral Frank F. Fletcher, retired, a member of the board, but neither gave any intimation of what was discussed.

The American Society for Promotion of Aviation, in a letter to the president Tuesday protested against the selection of Howard E. Coffin of Detroit, as a board member.

The communication, signed by Thomas L. Hill, president of the society, congratulated Coolidge upon naming the board, but said the "presence of one member, Howard E. Coffin will breed mistrust in the minds of the public, and to a great extent, defeat the purpose for which the board was created."

Senator King, of Utah, a Democratic member of the senate naval committee, also took cognizance of the board Tuesday, declaring its appointment was a "gesture" to stop efforts for an inquiry by congress, which he said would be carried thru at the approaching session.

Experts Would Make
Cemetery Like Park

"A remarkable change is appearing in the cemeteries and on the memorial stones of America as a result of the efforts of memorial dealers to incorporate art in design," says Prof. W. H. Varnum of the department of applied arts in the University of Wisconsin.

"We are trying to get away from the lack of beauty of the older cemetery monument," says Professor Varnum, "by eliminating the unnatural looking granite blocks with heavy bases. Monument experts are trying to make cemeteries more like parks with memorials that harmonize with nature.

"Memorials in the future will be personalized. Line rather than elaborate floral design will characterize the deceased person. A successful scientist's memorial, for example, should be a slim obelisk, showing the successful termination of a strong life that has led in one direction."

Symbolic lines also would suggest the youth rather than an ornamental design which "slops over" in taste and sentiment. The youth's memorial would likely be tapered but not pointed, so as to suggest an abrupt ending of a young life. It would be of lighter material and with a small base.

A mausoleum, according to Professor Varnum, should be simple in line and set apart from the surrounding memorials so as to give it an adequate setting. The overuse of elaborate floral design has been due, in part, he points out, to the process of sand-blasting for enrichment of the plain stone. The process has been cheap and has therefore been used to excess. The former demand for huge blocks of granite has been due, in part, to the effort of dealers to give as much for the money as possible.

In many cemeteries now the authorities are formulating and enforcing regulations as to the design and size of memorials and causing their height to correspond to the immediate surrounding topography.

Cancer Investigation

A German scientist, Dr. A. Werschinski, has obtained results that seem to confirm the view that cancerous and tumorous growths are similar to embryonic tissue, in that they are simply masses of rapidly growing cells; but that they have "run wild" and escaped from the controls of normal growth. Doctor Werschinski injected finely minced embryonic kidney and adrenal tissue under the skin of a guinea pig, which subsequently developed characteristic tumorous growths in two different parts of its body.

Practically all the great countries of antiquity were deficient in natural supplies of iron. Consequently, most of the civilized people of early times had few tools, limited largely to shovels, hoes and weapons.

Wants to See Action

"My greatest desire," said a Prairie avenue salesman, "is to see someone, some day, use a fire extinguisher. I've been going through the buildings of Detroit for many years and I've seen all sizes and shapes of extinguishers hanging in all possible positions. But never in all this time have I been fortunate enough to witness one in operation. I suppose they are used many times. Perhaps if I continue with my wish I may run into a slight blaze sometime that will give me my thrill. Even better, I may be able to satisfy a greater longing—that of yanking the extinguisher from its moorings and playing it on the blaze myself."—Detroit News.

Sea Deposits Coal

On the beach of Buchhaven in Fifeshire, Scotland, the sea piles up coal some two or three feet thick. From the town come men, women and children with buckets, boxes, bags and wheelbarrows to get the family supply. From the country come farmers on their horses with bags to get their share, according to the Kansas City Times.

The coal is actually mined by the sea. Ground swells break away the seams outcropping in the Firth of Forth and slowly carry the treasure to the shore.

In stormy weather the product greatly increases.

Making It Clear

Two elderly men, both extremely deaf, met on a country road. Dave had a fishing pole in his wagon. When he saw his friend Jim he stopped the horse.

"Goin' fishin'?" shouted Jim.

"No," Dave replied, "I'm goin' fish-in'."

"Oh," said Jim. "I thought mebbe you was goin' fishin'."—Country Gentleman.

AMUSEMENTS

Flapperism comes in for a sound spanking and jazz receives a knock-out blow in Paramount's "Code of the West," which Lucien Hubbard adapted and William K. Howard produced from the Zane Grey novel of the same name.

The direct and drastic methods of the west were never better illustrated than in this absorbing photoplay in which a sturdy son of Arizona teaches a flapper daughter of New York the a-b-c of living and loving.

Pictured against marvelous natural backgrounds and abounding in breath-taking thrills, "Code of the West" unfolds its vivid, appealing story of the romance of Georgie May Stockwell, a frivolous little flapper, and Cal Thurman, a sturdy, virile cowboy.

The young westerner, unused to the ways of the east, falls an easy victim to the charms of Georgie, who flirts outrageously with him but laughs at him when he proposes to her. The realization that she has only been playing with him infuriates Cal and he forces her to marry him.

This is the beginning of an unusual series of events that reach a terrific climax during the height of a roaring forest fire. The manner in which Georgie and Cal escape paving the way to their ultimate reunion provides several mighty thrills and some great dramatic moments.

Owen Moore has the strong role of the cowboy caveman, and Constance Bennett gives a good account of herself as the flighty, flirty flapper. Others in the cast are Mabel Ballin, Charles Ogle and David Butler.

Ireland and Egypt

The term "Dominion" is applied generally to the self-governing British possessions beyond the seas, although the word does not in all cases form part of their names. In the case of Canada the word is part of the name, but such is not the case, for instance, of the Union of South Africa, or the Commonwealth of Australia, nor is it the case of the Irish Free State, and yet they may all be referred to as dominions. On November 18, 1914, a British protectorate was declared over Egypt, and the khedive assumed the title of sultan. In March, 1922, Egypt was declared to be an independent kingdom.

A System of Farming That Brings Health and Prosperity

Every farm, regardless of the method of farming practiced or of the crops raised, should have at least a few good milch cows to provide
(1) Enough milk, cream and butter for home use;
(2) Enough skim-milk to raise some calves, pigs and chickens;
(3) Enough cream or butter to sell to pay, in part or entirely, current living expenses.
This plan has been a "life-saver" for thousands of farmers, especially during the hard times of the past two years. It insures a living, at least, and often other income besides.
Such a plan pays best with a De Laval Cream Separator. It soon pays for itself—and skims cleaner, lasts longer and is easier to operate and clean than any other.

A Scotchman's Conscience
The purchasing agent of a big jobbing concern in San Francisco is a Scotchman. He gave an extensive order—indeed, the total ran into many thousands of dollars—to a salesman for a supply house. Although he had obtained the business in open competition, and by virtue of the excellence of his wares and the low figures he quoted, the salesman felt gratitude at being favored and sought a way to show it.

He knew he dare not offer the Scotchman a commission; likewise a gift of money, he figured, would be regarded as an insult. He had an inspiration. The Scotchman, he noticed, constantly smoked cigars. So the salesman excused himself for a minute, slipped out to a cigar store and bought a box containing fifty of the finest Havanas the tobacconist carried in stock. The price for the fifty was fifteen dollars. He brought the box back under his arm and asked the purchasing agent to accept it with his compliments.

The latter drew back. He explained that it was against the policy of his house for its buyers to accept presents of any sort from those with whom the concern did business. He was sorry, he said, but he could not take the cigars as a present, even though he felt sure his young friend had tendered them with the best of intentions and in absolute good faith. The salesman had another idea.

"Well," he said, "I hate to throw these cigars away. They are of no use to me—I smoke only cigarettes. I wonder if you would buy them from me?—there's no harm in that, I'm sure."
"What would you be asking for them, laddy?" inquired the prudent Scotchman.
"I'll sell the whole fifty to you for a nickel," stated the salesman.

The purchasing agent lifted one of the cigars from the top row, smelled it, rolled it in his fingers and eyed it closely.
"Very well," he said, "at that price I'll take four boxes."

All According to Specifications

"Now then, children," said the Sunday school teacher, in her best Sunday school teacher's manner, "the lesson for today is about the Prophet Elisha. Can any little boy or little girl here tell us anything about Elisha?"

"Me," answered a ten-year-old urchin, holding up his hand. "I can tell about him."

"Very well, then, Eddie," answered the teacher. "Now, then, all the rest of you be nice and quiet while Eddie tells us about the Prophet Elisha."

"Well," said Eddie, "Elisha was an old bald-headed preacher. One day he was goin' along the big road and he came past where some children were playin' in the sand, and they laughed at him and poked fun at him and called him names and hollered, 'Oh, look at that old bald-headed man!' That made Elisha hopplin' mad and he stopped and turned around and shook his fist at 'em and he said, 'Don't you kids make fun of me any more! If you do I'll call some bears out of them woods yonder and they'll shore eat you up.'"

"And they did and he did and the bears did."

He Lacked Storage Space

Congressman John K. Hendrick of Kentucky, now deceased, was notoriously soft hearted. He was sitting in a courtroom one day when a young and struggling member of the local bar, who was not especially renowned for mental brilliancy, undertook to read a petition in a divorce suit and speedily got himself badly tangled up in a confused maze of legal phrases. The judge undertook to set the young lawyer right, but the only result was to tangle him worse than ever. The judge was showing signs of losing his temper when Colonel Hendrick arose.

"I hope, your honor," he said, in his courtly speaking voice, "that you will bear patiently with our young friend here. He is doing his best."
"I know that, Colonel Hendrick," said the judge, somewhat testily, "and I intend to bear patiently with him. I am merely trying to give Mr. So-and-So an idea."

"Your honor," said Colonel Hendrick, "don't do it. He's got no place to put it."

Not This One: The Other One

There formerly were two Coveleskie brothers playing in the big leagues. One day Harry Coveleskie was pitching a game for Detroit against the Yankees at the Polo grounds in New York. As Damon Runyon sat in the press stand an attendant handed him a note which had been sent by one of a group of spectators in a grandstand box.

The note ran as follows:
"To settle a bet, please state which one of the Coveleskie boys this fellow is?"

Runyon turned the note over and made his answer on the reverse side of it.
"This," he wrote, "is the other one!"

REGULAR MEETING

At the regular meeting of the American Legion Auxiliary held at the residence of the president, Mrs. A. A. Parrett, last evening, a small but very appreciative and enthusiastic audience listened to the report of the president who as a delegate from the local Post attended the State convention which was held in Chillicothe on August 23 to 25.

The report was very interesting and a complete description of the activities of herself and the other delegate, Mrs. B. T. Hedges, from the time of their arrival until the closing session of the convention was given. At the conclusion of the report, a rising vote of thanks was given Mrs. Parrett for her complete report.

A letter from the local chapter of the American Red Cross which had been given the Legion for the comfort bags for the soldiers in the hospitals and which was given to the auxiliary to ask their assistance in making, was read and it was decided that next Monday evening a sewing would be held at the residence of Mrs. E. E. Prose to complete these bags.

There was quite a number of other matters discussed and business arranged among other things a letter was ordered written to the committee in charge of decorating of the Post room and an offer made which the committee can hardly fail to overlook.

It is to be hoped that at the next meeting of the Auxiliary more members will be present as the time was thoroughly enjoyed by those attending.

James W. Andrix, of Duvall, purchased the 199 acre tract at his bid of $71.75.

Alva Delong, of near Stoutsville, purchased the 90 acre tract at his bid of $62.00 an acre.

The sale attracted a goodly number of bidders.

This sale netted the estate $3,300 more than the first sale.

What Makes Grapes "Wild"?

Robert, the young son of Sheriff Burns of Petersburg, was present during a conversation between his mother and some friends, who were discussing the merits of the wild grape for pies, jelly, etc. With a puzzled expression on his face, he said:

"Mom, what kind of grapes are wild grapes?"

Mother Burns explained to him that wild grapes grew in the woods and were much smaller than "tame" grapes, whereupon Robert again asked:

"Will the wild grapes run away from you when you go after them, and will the tame grapes come to you when you call them?"

It was then that mother realized how utterly futile her attempts to make clear to her son why the wild grape was called "wild."—Indianapolis News

Why He Likes Knickers

"I've finally decided that knickers are a practical garment for men," declared a golfer. "I wore an old pair today and just before I started out I bought several new balls, tendered a bill in payment and received some silver in change. This I thrust into my pocket. There happened to be a hole in this pocket and when I came in I reached down for the change. It was gone. Now, if I had been wearing long trousers I'd have lost that money. But, since I wore socks outside my knickers, all I had to do was to search the proper sock. And there was my money. That's why I'm so certain that knickers are a very practical garment."

THE WEATHER EVEN WORRIED NOAH IN ARK

So Farmers of Today Have Plenty of Precedent to Follow Says Observer.

"Ever since Noah and his companions in the ark watched the sun come out and the rainbow dip down into the world of water the weather has been a vital factor in the development of the human race.

"Nowhere has this been more true than in man's efforts to gain a food supply by tilling the soil. Not only does the weather determine what crops can and cannot be grown, and how bountiful the yield of any given crop will be, but more largely, climate which is nothing but weather by the year—has been the dominant factor in determining the very character of the soil itself.

"No very good scheme having yet been devised for improving the weather, we are perhaps most concerned with the ways in which the soil and crop are affected by it, and the means at hand for protecting ourselves against adverse weather conditions."

That's the way Robert M. Salter, professor of soils at Ohio State university begins the September issue of Timely Soil Topics, a monthly pamphlet printed at the university for free distribution.

In the rest of the pamphlet Professor Salter tells how the weather feeds or starves a crop; shows how weather requirements differ for individual crops; explains some means of beating the weather; and concludes by telling how to make rain go farther.

Home-Town Opinion

It would take the dynamite kick of a mad Geomancer to make some men to rise a the world; and even at that, they'd growl because they wouldn't have time to pick a soft place to fall; and if they were able to catch hold of a rainbow up ponder, it would break all to pieces with their dead weight, and they'd come tumblin' down!—Atlanta Constitution.

HAS PROHIBITION INCREASED CRIME

NEGATIVE ANSWER GIVEN BY COUNCIL OF CHURCHES

The Bootlegger Is Getting Rich—Crime Increases As Drinking Slumps—The Automobile Says the Report Should Bear a Greater Responsibility Than the Hip Flask For Present Moral Conditions Among the Young.

An exhaustive discussion of the effect of prohibition on crime, conditions in settlement neighborhoods, drug addiction, morals of the young and respect for law in general was made public Tuesday night by the research and education department of the Federal Council of Churches as a third section of its special report on the social consequences of prohibition laws.

While pointing out that a lack of complete data makes definite conclusions impossible, the report made these assertions:

The tendency of young people of the present day to depart from conventional rules of behavior cannot be laid entirely at the door of prohibition but "the fact that prohibition has had no more decisive effect in heightening their moral tone gives food for earnest thought."

Crime statistics indicate a rapid increase in violation of law, chiefly of the misdemeanor class, but it is "gratuitous" to blame prohibition, and "all that can be asserted is that prohibition has thus far not prevented an increase in such offenses."

Available information indicates that in settlement neighborhoods there is less drinking and family life has improved under prohibition but that the law nevertheless is widely violated and "the bootlegger is getting rich."

Assertions that prohibition has tended to increase the use of drugs lack definite proof and would appear to be untrue.

"The general impression that respect for law is declining leads many ardent supporters of prohibition to believe that its foes are undermining all citizenship, while the latter assert very positively that prohibition has destroyed respect for all law. Fortunately, neither contention is fully supported by facts. The best authorities in psychology and education agree that a person's attitude toward law and government is not determined with reference to a single statute, and that hostility toward one law does not carry over into the whole field of the citizen's responsibility."

"The attitude of people toward their government, altho it often gives cause for concern, rests upon a broader basis than the popularity of a single law. Everyone takes some laws more seriously than others and necessarily so. All laws have not the same importance and some have greater social sanction than others. For this reason it would seem to be a mistake to rest the appeal for observance of prohibition laws merely upon the general duty to 'obey the law.' Rather an attitude of intelligent sympathy toward the law itself must be built up if it is to be generally observed."

In discussing effects of prohibition on crime the report declared that crime statistics are "notoriously inaccurate" and suggested that trends in crime conditions apparently have their basis in forces which long have been operative and are fairly independent of liquor laws."

The automobile, said the report, should bear a greater responsibility than the hip flask for present moral conditions among the young.

"Reports of school administration officials and of teachers who have made studies of moral problems in the schools give little support to the theory that prohibition is in itself a cause of moral breakdown." It continued. "It may perhaps just as truly be said that it does not appear to be a great asset. Certainly nonobservance of the law by parents has a rather tragic effect on boys and girls. "In colleges, undoubtedly, some alarming conditions have developed. Even in conservative denominational college a student has been known to earn his way thru school by bootlegging. The evidence, however, seems to indicate a favorable trend at the present time; at least this is the opinion of nearly all the college deans consulted, and it receives some measure of support from other sources."

DISOBEDIENCE COSTLY TO FORD LOSS $5,000,000

The Detroit Free Press of Wednesday morning says that an effort of employees at the Ford Motor Co., to improve upon methods of Henry Ford caused a delay of two weeks in the production of the new model automobiles of the company. The story says Henry Ford previously insisted that all parts be worked out in wood before being made into metal to insure perfect fitting.

This time, according to the story, several Ford employees, without consulting anyone, decided to work direct from the blueprints and for this reason it was impossible to fit together machines shipped to Ford assembly plants thruout the country.

Officials of the Ford Co., it is stated refuse to comment on an article Tuesday in the Wall Street Journal asserting that the two weeks' delay had cost the company $5,000,000. It was denied there had been any wholesale dismissal of employees as a result of the error and also that the error had resulted from the activity of paid mechanics placed in the Ford Co., plants by a rival motor car company.

Columbus — Professor Henry C. Lord, 59, who for 21 years has been director of the Emerson McMillen observatory at Ohio State university died Tuesday night at the McMillen sanitarium after a two years illness.

Dayton, — Dick Parrish, 50, a highway laborer, who was fatally injured Tuesday when his companion, John Fox, 60 was crushed to death, died a few hours later. They were working on a road over the Englewood dam and a heavy truck with a trailer passed. The trailer broke away from the truck and caught both men. Both lived at Little York.

Youngstown — In the interest of economy, the 25 new girl clerks for the City Hall here will be selected from the "non-powdering and non-rouging" class, it was announced today. Officials claim that hours are wasted in the course of a month by girls who, every few minutes, dash up to the office mirrors for a dab of powder or a slap of rouge.

TAMMANY RIDES TO POPULARITY DEFEATS HYLAN

Democratic Nominate State Sen. Walker, Republicans — Frank D. Waterman.

State Senator James J. Walker of New York, overwhelmed Mayor Hylan Tuesday in the Democratic primary election of a mayoralty candidate, and Tammany Hall, under the leadership of Governor Al. Smith and George W. Olvany, won a signal victory.

Walker's majority was estimated early Tuesday evening at 90,000, with the possibility indicated that this would ultimately exceed the 100,000 which his managers prophesied for him.

The whole Tammany ticket was swept to victory over the Hylan lineup.

Walker and his companions on the ticket carried Manhattan, the Bronx and Brooklyn.

Indications were that Hylan would prevail in Queens and Richmond, but with majorities entirely too small to make an impression on the votes rolled up elsewhere by the Tammany ticket.

The victory for the head of the Tammany ticket carried with it the nomination of Gen. Charles W. Berry Tammany candidate for controller and Justice Jos. V. McGee, Tammany candidate for president of the board of alderman.

They defeated their opponents on the Hylan ticket, William H. Edwards and Willis A. Coakley by margins almost as great as Walker.

G. O. P. Contest Walkaway.

The Republican contest proved a walkaway for Frank D. Waterman, pen manufacturer, the regular organization candidate. He was leading William M. Bennett and John J. Lyons insurgent candidates, by an 8 to 1 basis. The Republican contest was overshadowed by the fight among the Democrats. The Republican vote was tabulated slowly as the Democratic votes were counted first.

Governor Smith's old East Side district, under the shadow of Brooklyn bridge, gave Senator Walker one of the biggest majorities of any district in the city. The vote was; Walker 302; Hylan, 15.

Senator Walker apparently carried with him the rest of the Tammany ticket, including General Charles W. Berry for comptroller and Joseph V. McKee for president of the board of aldermen.

William H. (Big Bill) Edwards, former Princeton football star, who was Mayor Hylan's candidate for comptroller, made a better run than some of his colleagues.

LA FOLLETTE WINS EASILY IN WISCONSIN

Rode in on Dead Father's Popularity, Election Will be Held Sept. 29.

Robert M. La Follette Jr., continued in the footsteps of his late father Tuesday, when he won the Republican nomination for the U. S. senatorship. His victory came in a decisive manner against three other Republican candidates. He will go into the final election September 29.

From the first returns, young Bob, as he is known thru the country, displayed vote getting tendencies as good, if not better than his father who was known to hold the Wisconsin vote in the hollow of his hand.

Wins City and County.

In the city and in the county alike, he piled up his majority over his three Republican opponents.

True to their Coolidge Republican tendencies the southeastern Wisconsin counties repudiated La Follette on the strength of almost complete returns, which show a heavy vote in favor of Roy P. Wilcox, Coolidge Republican candidate. Kenosha county was running two to one in his favor. Walworth and Rock counties were also giving him a majority, while Racine county completely fell from grace by returning La Follette 1,000 votes advantage.

Calumet county, across the lake from Oshkosh, the home of the anti-La Follette movement, at this election gave tendencies of turning away from the youthful candidate by dividing its vote almost equally. The other 66 counties in the state were for La Follette without reservation.

Analysis of the returns with more than half of the precincts reported shows Wilcox running more than two to one behind La Follette. Daniel Woodward, who has the Ku Klux Klan indorsement, was the surprise of the race, holding to third place and plowing along about two to one behind Wilcox. Francis E. McGovern, at one time a good-enough vote getter to be elected governor of the state on two occasions, was two to one behind Woodward and had conceded the nomination of La Follette.

In the Democratic race William George Bruce of Milwaukee, nominated at the regular Democratic convention, was so far ahead of Judge Charles B. Rogers of Port Atkinson, running on stickers, that it was considered no contest.

ACCEPTING DEPOSITS WITHOUT AUTHORITY

Menace, Says Scott—State Bank Superintendent Says Money of Public Will Be Protected By His Department—Investors are Warned.

Columbus, Sept. 14.—Following several conferences with Attorney General Crabbe, H. E. Scott, state superintendent of banks, today opened fire upon individuals and corporations in Ohio, not under supervision of the banking laws, which are accepting money from the public in return for certificates of indebtedness, interest bearing notes, or other evidence of debt.

At the same time, Mr. Scott warned the public against buying such evidences of debt, because of the risk involved.

"It recently came to our attention," Mr. Scott said, "that several corporations, engaged in the business of lending money upon chattel or wage security, or upon second mortgages, also were soliciting money from the public to use in its operations and were issuing, in receipt for its deposit with them, certificates of indebtedness, interest bearing notes, or other evidences of debt. The department obtained several such certificates, and the advertising matter issued by these concerns, and submitted the entire proposition to the Attorney General. He ruled that such practice constitutes accepting deposits in violation of the banking law.

"Not authorized to do a banking business, not organized nor conducted under the safeguards which the law throws about the banking business in this state, these concerns have been operating a bank. The law on this point is very clear. The only institutions authorized by Ohio law to accept deposits are banks, building and loan associations and title guaranty and trust companies. Any other concern which offers to accept your money, pay you interest, and give you back your principal, either upon demand, upon notice or at a certain future time, is engaging in the banking business without authority and is subject to heavy penalty."

Mr. Scott pointed out that the danger to the public lies in the fact that these corporations are not subject to periodical state examination and supervision; that there is no state authority to supervise their investments and their handling of their funds, so that they take many risks which the authorized institutions of deposit cannot and would not do. Because of the chances they take, they charge high rates of interest upon the money they lend, and promise attractive returns upon money left upon deposit with them.

"It's the old, old story that has been told so often," said Mr. Scott. "When any company offers to pay you a high return upon your money, higher than you can get from investment in safe, sound securities, or from savings deposits, the element of risk and speculation always is present. It is impossible for any company to pay these high returns, and, at the same time, guarantee that it will give you back your principal whenever you want or need it."

The state banking department is anxious to learn of the activities of companies making such offers and accepting money in this way, Mr. Scott asserted. Wherever they are found, they will be compelled to stop the practice.

FAMILY REUNIONS

One of the most thoroughly delightful of the summer reunions and bringing together nearly seventy members of the James and Coover families connection, was entertained by Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Holdren at their handsome country place Friday. The reunion was in honor of Mrs. Daisy James Wade and daughter, Miss Elizabeth, of Emporia, Kansas, who have been guests at the Holdren home for several days, enroute to New York City, where Miss Wade is in charge of the Columbia University lunch rooms. Owing to the brevity of their stay which forbade much visiting in a large circle of relatives Mr. and Mrs. Holdren conceived the happy idea of assembling the family for a day of visiting and feasting.

The fine old grove in front of the home was ideal for the gathering, its big shady trees and refreshing breezes making it the coolest place in the county—under the trees, long tables were prettily decorated with bright hued fall flowers for the dinner served cafeteria fashion. There were huge platters of fried chicken, all kinds of salads, sandwiches, home baked cakes and all manner of eatables taken from the hamper and supplemented by the entertainers with ice cream, punch, ice tea, and everything to be thought of in such generous quantities that there was enough left for another reunion.

The interesting honor guests were the center of an afternoon of pleasurable sociability, promoted in every way by Mr. and Mrs. Holdren, their daughter, Mrs. Robert Rodgers and Miss Ruby Lee and son, Mr. Frank Holdren and wife.

Rev. Clifford, of Bourneville, made a spicy little talk, enthusiastic in its uniting of family interests. In addition to the honor guests those participating were: Dr. and Mrs. Robert Jones, son, Robert, of Greenfield; Mrs. Margaret A. James, of Daytona, Fla.; Mr. and Mrs. Ned James, Miss Eva James, Mr. and Mrs. Irvin Dunlap and daughter, of Greenfield; Mr. and Mrs. Milton James, Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Putnam, Frankfort; Mrs. Belle Putnam, of Austin; Mrs. Dudley Briggs, Mr. William Briggs, Mayor W. Holdren, Mrs. Arizona Holdren and daughter, Mrs. Charles Morgan, Mrs. Frank James, Mr. Robert James, Miss Ida Post, Miss Ella Taylor, Miss Florence Ustick and Mr. D. Miller, of this city.

The country home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles M. Clifton, on the White road, near New Holland, was hospitably thrown open, Friday, for a reunion of former residents of that vicinity.

The affair brought together a number of old friends, whose intimacy was interrupted by the removal to other cities of many, and especially complimented Mrs. John D. Fidler and daughter, Miss Eleanor, of St. Louis, and Mrs. Herbert D. Martin, of Des Moines, Ia. The guests came from all of the surrounding cities and brought a delicious basket dinner that was spread in the dining room and served cafeteria style. Pretty bouquets of fall flowers were used in decoration throughout the home. Mrs. Clifton was assisted in the elaborate preparations by Mrs. A. F. Kaler, of New Holland, and Miss Elizabeth May, of Washington, D. C.

Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. John D. Fidler and daughter, Miss Eleanor, of St. Louis; Mrs. Herbert D. Martin, of Des Moines, Ia.; Mr. and Mrs. John H. Dunlap and son, John Jr., of Williamsport; Mr. and Mrs.

Her Recognition

Small Elizabeth and her mother were walking down the street when they saw an urchin approaching them. Elizabeth stuck out her tongue. When they had gone on, her mother inquired "Why did you stick out your tongue at that little boy we just passed?" There was a pause while Elizabeth considered. "Why?" she replied, at length. "Why, mother, to show him I recognized him!"

HUGE INCREASE IN TAXES SINCE 1914

United States Pays $7,716,000,000 Annually.

New York.—The immense financial burden imposed upon the principal nations associated during the World war against the central powers is analyzed in a comparative study of taxation in the allied countries made by the national industrial conference board.

Taxation in the United States nominally has more than trebled since pre-war days. The total amount of local, state and federal taxes levied in the fiscal year 1923-24 amounted to $7,716,000,000, as compared with $2,104,000,000 in 1913-14. Taking into account the decrease of purchasing power of the dollar during the war decade, this represents an actual increase in the tax burden of two and a quarter times that of the last prewar year.

Per Capita Tax Doubled.

Per capita taxation more than doubled in both the United States and Great Britain. But Great Britain in 1924, six years after the signing of the armistice, led all allied countries both in amount of taxes levied per head of population and in the proportion of total national income diverted into channels of governmental expenditures. France, Italy, Belgium and the United States follow in order, according to the burdensomeness which their respective tax systems imposed upon their people as measured by the relation of taxes to national income.

British per capita taxes, amounting to $27.11 in the fiscal year 1913-14, had risen to $58.40 in 1923-24, in terms of 1913 purchasing power; per capita taxes in the United States, figured on the same basis, increased from $22.73 in 1913-14 to $45.27 in 1923-24; in France, from $24.70 to $29.53; in Belgium, from $11.39 to $17.76; in Italy the per capita tax remained the same, $14.28, taking into account the lower purchasing power of the 1924 currency. Comparative figures for Germany are not available.

Increased Relative to Income.

In both the United States and Great Britain taxation in proportion to national income approximately doubled, in Belgium more than doubled since prewar days.

While taxation in the United States and Great Britain increased in about the same proportion, and these two countries levy the highest per capita taxes among the allied nations, the greater material wealth and productivity of the American nation make its tax burden comparatively lighter than that borne by any of the European allied countries. Net revenues in the United States, moreover, are spent largely for universal education, good roads, public buildings, parks and other reinvestment of the taxpayers' money, the conference board analysis indicates, while the proceeds of taxation in Europe are to a great extent absorbed in paying the cost of past wars.

ALONG LIFE'S TRAIL

By THOMAS A. CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.
(©, 1924, Western Newspaper Union.)

YOUTH

MIDDLE age is less optimistic than youth, less courageous, and meets pain and dangers and discomforts with less fortitude.

My neighbor, Harris, shuffled into the office a day or two ago when the thermometer was registering 96 in the shade and in the sun had pushed its way through the top of the tube. He was mopping a damp brow, breathing heavily, and presenting a general appearance of ill temper and dissatisfaction.

"Well, who's sold you a gold brick this time?" I asked him.

"I'm all knocked out today," he replied. "It was so blasted hot last night that I couldn't sleep a wink, and I'll be no good all day."

"The trouble with you, Harris," I said, "is that you're growing old." I've known Harris since he was a boy of ten on the farm. He slept then in the unplastered attic just under the roof. The roof had but one little window in it, and this window gave no ventilation to the room but served only as a means of entrance of the sun's pitiless rays that beat on the roof throughout the long August days and rendered the room a veritable furnace at night. And yet Harris scarcely noticed the heat then. He had youth; he was tired and groggy with sleep when he mounted to his bed in the attic, and he dropped off almost the moment he touched the hot sheets and slept until he was awakened in the morning by his mother's voice.

Now he has a cold shower before going to his pleasant bed in his sleeping porch. He lives under the most favorable conditions, but a little rise in the thermometer puts him out of sorts for an entire day.

I visited Crane in the hospital the other day. He is middle aged. He has had some minor surgery done on him—an ingrowing toe nail taken off or a boil lanced or something of that sort. He is as gloomy as a grave yard, and as irritable as a teething child. All his plans for the summer have been upset, and the little pain and discomfort he has suffered has put him on "low." It was depressing to talk to him.

And then I remembered the letter I had from Blum. Blum was at the front at the beginning of the German drive. He met rain and mud and vermin with a cheerful laugh; he faced a storm of bullets and blood, and when he wrote the letter he was lying in a hospital severely wounded.

"Here I am 'sitting on the world,' as the boys put it," he wrote. "Nice white enameled bed, clean white sheets, white blankets and all. Good food; nothing to do but eat and sleep. Pretty soft."

"Don't have any worry about me; I'm in clover and having a good rest. I'm all right; I'm eating like a horse and kicking because they don't give me enough."

"Love and good luck to everybody." Oh, youth, youth!

TREASURES IN INDIAN GRAVES

Plunder Taken From Panama's Old Cemeteries.

Perhaps the most interesting cemeteries in the world, those of an ancient Indian race of which little is known, are situated near Bugaba, Chiriqui, Panama. Formerly the graves covered a vast territory, but many have been opened and plundered.

In 1857 a Spaniard who was digging on his plantation in Panama unearthed a grave that contained some gold ornaments. He continued to dig and gathered a fortune before his secret became known. Then everyone began to hunt for gold and thousands upon thousands of graves were destroyed and countless priceless relics were broken and lost to archeologists.

An idea of the number of graves may be had from the account of Gen. Thomas F. Meagher, who crossed the isthmus from David to Bocas del Toro, 50 years ago. He writes: "A mile outside of Dolega the party stopped at the house of Robert Soles, the discoverer of the golden relics in the Indian graves of Chiriqui. All the way from David we had ridden through thousands of these ransacked graves, and in every direction for leagues and leagues . . . we might have seen tens of thousands more."

Between 1858 and 1868 thousands of pounds' worth of gold ornaments were shipped to the Bank of England and melted for bullion, and thousands of beautiful pottery vases were broken and covered the ground on the site of the graves. They were of many sizes, shapes and designs, some plain, and some fancifully decorated with quaint and grotesque human figures, some painted in patterns, and some molded in relief. A number had three legs that were hollow and contained little balls that rattled when the vessel was handled. In those vases gold ornaments were frequently found, and it is supposed that the loose balls in the legs were to scare away evil spirits.

Few implements of stone are found in the graves, except a few celts, or grooved axes of stone, a few long knives, and once in a long while an arrow head. Fine metates, or mortars of stone, are sometimes found, carved in the shape of a jaguar or a frog or an armadillo. Stone molds in which some of the gold ornaments were made, and also goldsmith's tools of stone, found in the graves, show the people to have been far advanced in civilization.—Youth's Companion.

Writer Sees Virtue in Incompatibility

"John and I get on splendidly," said Joan. "We never agree, you see, and by downright arguments about totally impersonal things we find an outlet for all the petty grievances and impatiences of every-day life. And so, because we lack what is commonly described as 'having lots in common,' we always have something to talk about, something to discuss from different angles without necessarily touching upon purely personal affairs. It is so good for both of us; we are thoroughly happy."

Thus a married friend of mine, a wife of four years' standing, over whose marriage to a man some years her senior and of completely different habits and tastes wise people had shaken despondent heads, Marjory Swift comments, in the Washington Post.

Is total compatibility so utterly necessary for happily married life as is commonly thought? Rather is it not possible that by their very difference each partner can supply what the other lacks, the combination making a perfect companionship?

My friend's experience leads me to decide that total incompatibility, as recognized by the vast majority, is the most important ingredient for the success of that subtle compound marriage. With it that stimulation which only intelligent disagreement with, and criticism of, one's fundamental views and ideas can supply, will ever be present; the necessity for remaining oneself, for upholding one's own ideals, will ever spur one on a vigorous defense of those ideals.

Thus one would never grow old. Always stimulated, always on the defensive, one's brain would laugh at the passage of the years, would find it impossible, because of its activity, to collect clogging rust.

And think of the joy of living with someone who, day in, day out, will not, cannot, say, "Yes, dear, I quite agree; you are perfectly right." How terribly corroding it must be to experience daily acquiescence, however futile one's ideas!

ACCEPTING DEPOSITS WITHOUT AUTHORITY

Menace, Says Scott—State Bank Superintendent Says Money of Public Will Be Protected By His Department—Investors are Warned.

Columbus, Sept. 14.—Following several conferences with Attorney General Crabbe, H. E. Scott, state superintendent of banks, today opened fire upon individuals and corporations in Ohio, not under supervision of the banking laws, which are accepting money from the public in return for certificates of indebtedness, interest bearing notes, or other evidence of debt.

At the same time, Mr. Scott warned the public against buying such evidences of debt, because of the risk involved.

"It recently came to our attention," Mr. Scott said, "that several corporations, engaged in the business of lending money upon chattel or wage security, or upon second mortgages, also were soliciting money from the public to use in its operations and were issuing, in receipt for its deposit with them, certificates of indebtedness, interest bearing notes, or other evidences of debt. The department obtained several such certificates, and the advertising matter issued by these concerns, and submitted the entire proposition to the Attorney General. He ruled that such practice constitutes accepting deposits in violation of the banking law.

"Not authorized to do a banking business, not organized nor conducted under the safeguards which the law throws about the banking business in this state, these concerns have been operating a bank. The law on this point is very clear. The only institutions authorized by Ohio law to accept deposits are banks, building and loan associations and title guaranty and trust companies. Any other concern which offers to accept your money, pay you interest, and give you back your principal, either upon demand, upon notice or at a certain future time, is engaging in the banking business without authority and is subject to heavy penalty."

Mr. Scott pointed out that the danger to the public lies in the fact that these corporations are not subject to periodical state examination and supervision; that there is no state authority to supervise their investments and their handling of their funds, so that they take many risks which the authorized institutions of deposit cannot and would not do. Because of the chances they take, they charge high rates of interest upon the money they lend, and promise attractive returns upon money left upon deposit with them.

"It's the old, old story that has been told so often," said Mr. Scott. "When any company offers to pay you a high return upon your money, higher than you can get from investment in safe, sound securities, or from savings deposits, the element of risk and speculation always is present. It is impossible for any company to pay these high returns, and, at the same time, guarantee that it will give you back your principal whenever you want or need it."

The state banking department is anxious to learn of the activities of companies making such offers and accepting money in this way, Mr. Scott asserted. Wherever they are found, they will be compelled to stop the practice.

Columbus, Sept. 14.—Accidents in Ohio Industries took a toll of 78 lives in August, according to a report made public today by the State Department of Industrial Relations. This was an increase of seven over July.

During the month there were 19,129 persons injured, compared with 17,632 in July.

Payments to the workmen's compensation fund in August totaled $1,496,955.19, while expenditures amounted to $1,046,134.27, leaving a gross balance of $47,731.216. 99 per cent of which is pledged for payment of approved claims.

FAMILY REUNIONS

One of the most thoroughly delightful of the summer reunions and bringing together nearly seventy members of the James and Coover families connection, was entertained by Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Holdren at their handsome country place Friday. The reunion was in honor of Mrs. Daisy James Wade and daughter, Miss Elizabeth, of Emporia, Kansas, who have been guests at the Holdren home for several days, enroute to New York City, where Miss Wade is in charge of the Columbia University lunch rooms. Owing to the brevity of their stay which forbade much visiting in a large circle of relatives Mr. and Mrs. Holdren conceived the happy idea of assembling the family for a day of visiting and feasting.

The fine old grove in front of the home was ideal for the gathering, its big shady trees and refreshing breezes making it the coolest place in the county—under the trees, long tables were prettily decorated with bright hued fall flowers for the dinner served cafeteria fashion. There were huge platters of fried chicken, all kinds of salads, sandwiches, home baked cakes and all manner of eatables taken from the hamper and supplemented by the entertainers with ice cream, punch, ice tea, and everything to be thought of in such generous quantities that there was enough left for another reunion.

The interesting honor guests were the center of an afternoon of pleasureable sociability, promoted in every way by Mr. and Mrs. Holdren, their daughter, Mrs. Robert Rodgers and Miss Ruby Lee and son, Mr. Frank Holdren and wife.

Rev. Clifford, of Bourneville, made a spicy little talk, enthusiastic in its uniting of family interests. In addition to the honor guests those participating were: Dr. and Mrs. Robert Jones, son, Robert, of Greenfield; Mrs. Margaret A. James, of Daytona, Fla.; Mr. and Mrs. Ned James, Miss Eva James, Mr. and Mrs. Irvin Dunlap and daughter, of Greenfield; Mr. and Mrs. Milton James, Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Putnam, Frankfort; Mrs. Belle Putnam, of Austin; Mrs. Dudley Briggs, Mr. William Briggs, Mayor W. K. Briggs, Miss Lillie Briggs, Mrs. Floyd James and daughter, Betty; Mr. Stroud Briggs, Mrs. Percy May, of New Holland; Rev. and Mrs. James Clifford, Mr. G. S. Coover, Mrs. Jessie Vore and Miss Myrtle Coover, of Bourneville; Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Holdren, Mrs. Arizona Holdren and daughter, Mrs. Charles Morgan, Mrs. Frank James, Mr. Robert James, Miss Ida Post, Miss Ella Taylor, Miss Florence Ustick and Mr. D. Miller, of this city.

The country home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles M. Clifton, on the White road, near New Holland, was hospitably thrown open, Friday, for a reunion of former residents of that vicinity.

The affair brought together a number of old friends, whose intimacy was interrupted by the removal to other cities of many, and especially complimented Mrs. John D. Fidler and daughter, Miss Eleanor, of St. Louis, and Mrs. Herbert D. Martin, of Des Moines, Ia. The guests came from all of the surrounding cities and brought a delicious basket dinner that was spread in the dining room and served cafeteria style. Pretty bouquets of fall flowers were used in decoration throughout the home. Mrs. Clifton was assisted in the elaborate preparations by Mrs. A. F. Kaler, of New Holland, and Miss Elizabeth May, of Washington, D. C.

Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. John D. Fidler and daughter, Miss Eleanor, of St. Louis; Mrs. Herbert D. Martin, of Des Moines, Ia.; Mr. and Mrs. John H. Dunlap and son, John Jr., of Williamsport; Mr. and Mrs.

Her Recognition

Small Elizabeth and her mother were walking down the street when they saw an urchin approaching them. Elizabeth stuck out her tongue. When they had gone on, her mother inquired "Why did you stick out your tongue at that little boy we just passed?" There was a pause while Elizabeth considered. "Why?" she replied, at length. "Why, mother, to show him I recognized him!"

HUGE INCREASE IN TAXES SINCE 1914

United States Pays $7,716,000,000 Annually.

New York.—The immense financial burden imposed upon the principal nations associated during the World war against the central powers is analyzed in a comparative study of taxation in the allied countries made by the national industrial conference board.

Taxation in the United States nominally has more than trebled since prewar days. The total amount of local, state and federal taxes levied in the fiscal year 1923-24 amounted to $7,716,000,000, as compared with $2,194,000,000 in 1913-14. Taking into account the decrease of purchasing power of the dollar during the war decade, this represents an actual increase in the tax burden of two and a quarter times that of the last prewar year.

Per Capita Tax Doubled.

Per capita taxation more than doubled in both the United States and Great Britain. But Great Britain in 1924, six years after the signing of the armistice, led all allied countries both in amount of taxes levied per head of population and in the proportion of total national income diverted into channels of governmental expenditures. France, Italy, Belgium and the United States follow in order, according to the burdensomeness which their respective tax systems imposed upon their people as measured by the relation of taxes to national income.

British per capita taxes, amounting to $27.11 in the fiscal year 1913-14, had risen to $58.40 in 1923-24, in terms of 1913 purchasing power; per capita taxes in the United States, figured on the same basis, increased from $22.73 in 1913-14 to $45.27 in 1923-24; in France, from $24.70 to $29.53; in Belgium, from $11.39 to $17.76; in Italy the per capita tax remained the same, $14.28, taking into account the lower purchasing power of the 1924 currency. Comparative figures for Germany are not available.

Increased Relative to Income.

In both the United States and Great Britain taxation in proportion to national income approximately doubled, in Belgium more than doubled since prewar days.

While taxation in the United States and Great Britain increased in about the same proportion, and these two countries levy the highest per capita taxes among the allied nations, the greater material wealth and productivity of the American nation make its tax burden comparatively lighter than that borne by any of the European allied countries. Net revenues in the United States, moreover, are spent largely for universal education, good roads, public buildings, parks and other reinvestment of the taxpayers' money, the conference board analysis indicates, while the proceeds of taxation in Europe are to a great extent absorbed in paying the cost of past wars.

TREASURES IN INDIAN GRAVES

Plunder Taken From Panama's Old Cemeteries.

Perhaps the most interesting cemeteries in the world, those of an ancient Indian race of which little is known, are situated near Bugaba, Chiriqui, Panama. Formerly the graves covered a vast territory, but many have been opened and plundered.

In 1857 a Spaniard who was digging on his plantation in Panama unearthed a grave that contained some gold ornaments. He continued to dig and gathered a fortune before his secret became known. Then everyone began to hunt for gold and thousands upon thousands of graves were destroyed and countless priceless relics were broken and lost to archeologists.

An idea of the number of graves may be had from the account of Gen. Thomas F. Meagher, who crossed the Isthmus from David to Bocas del Toro, 50 years ago. He writes: "A mile outside of Dolega the party stopped at the house of Robert Soles, the discoverer of the golden relics in the Indian graves of Chiriqui. All the way from David we had ridden through thousands of these ransacked graves, and in every direction for leagues and leagues . . . we might have seen tens of thousands more."

Between 1858 and 1868 thousands of pounds' worth of gold ornaments were shipped to the Bank of England and melted for bullion, and thousands of beautiful pottery vases were broken and covered the ground on the site of the graves. They were of many sizes, shapes and designs, some plain, and some fancifully decorated with quaint and grotesque human figures, some painted in patterns, and some molded in relief. A number had three legs that were hollow and contained little balls that rattled when the vessel was handled. In those vases gold ornaments were frequently found, and it is supposed that the loose balls in the legs were to scare away evil spirits.

Few implements of stone are found in the graves, except a few celts, or grooved axes of stone, a few long knives, and once in a long while an arrow head. Fine metates, or mortars of stone, are sometimes found, carved in the shape of a jaguar or a frog or an armadillo. Stone molds in which some of the gold ornaments were made, and also goldsmith's tools of stone, found in the graves, show the people to have been far advanced in civilization.—Youth's Companion.

ALONG LIFE'S TRAIL

By THOMAS A. CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.
(©, 1924, Western Newspaper Union.)

YOUTH

MIDDLE age is less optimistic than youth, less courageous, and meets pain and dangers and discomforts with less fortitude.

My neighbor, Harris, shuffled into the office a day or two ago when the thermometer was registering 96 in the shade and in the sun had pushed its way through the top of the tube. He was mopping a damp brow, breathing heavily, and presenting a general appearance of ill temper and dissatisfaction.

"Well, who's sold you a gold brick this time?" I asked him.

"I'm all knocked out today," he replied. "It was so blasted hot last night that I couldn't sleep a wink, and I'll be no good all day."

"The trouble with you, Harris," I said, "is that you're growing old." I've known Harris since he was a boy of ten on the farm. He slept then in the unplastered attic just under the roof. The roof had but one little window in it, and this window gave no ventilation to the room but served only as a means of entrance of the sun's pitiless rays that beat on the roof throughout the long August days and rendered the room a veritable furnace at night. And yet Harris scarcely noticed the heat then. He had youth; he was tired and groggy with sleep when he mounted to his bed in the attic, and he dropped off almost the moment he touched the hot sheets and slept until he was awakened in the morning by his mother's voice.

Now he has a cold shower before going to his pleasant bed in his sleeping porch. He lives under the most favorable conditions, but a little rise in the thermometer puts him out of sorts for an entire day.

I visited Crane in the hospital the other day. He is middle aged. He has had some minor surgery done on him—an ingrowing toe nail taken off or a boil lanced or something of that sort. He is as gloomy as a grave yard, and as irritable as a teething child. All his plans for the summer have been upset, and the little pain and discomfort he has suffered has put him on "low." It was depressing to talk to him.

And then I remembered the letter I had from Blum. Blum was at the front at the beginning of the German drive. He met rain and mud and vermin with a cheerful laugh; he faced a storm of bullets and blood, and when he wrote the letter he was lying in a hospital severely wounded.

"Here I am 'sitting on the world,' as the boys put it," he wrote. "Nice white enameled bed, clean white sheets, white blankets and all. Good food; nothing to do but eat and sleep. Pretty soft.

"Don't have any worry about me; I'm in clover and having a good rest. I'm all right; I'm eating like a horse and kicking because they don't give me enough.

"Love and good luck to everybody." Oh, youth, youth!

Writer Sees Virtue in Incompatibility

"John and I get on splendidly," said Joan. "We never agree, you see, and by downright arguments about totally impersonal things we find an outlet for all the petty grievances and impatiences of every-day life. And so, because we lack what is commonly described as 'having lots in common,' we always have something to talk about, something to discuss from different angles without necessarily touching upon purely personal affairs. It is so good for both of us; we are thoroughly happy."

Thus a married friend of mine, a wife of four years' standing, over whose marriage to a man some years her senior and of completely different habits and tastes wise people had shaken despondent heads, Marjory Swift comments, in the Washington Post.

Is total compatibility so utterly necessary for happily married life as is commonly thought? Rather is it not possible that by their very difference each partner can supply what the other lacks, the combination making a perfect companionship?

My friend's experience leads me to decide that total incompatibility, as recognized by the vast majority, is the most important ingredient for the success of that subtle compound marriage. With it that stimulation which only intelligent disagreement with, and criticism of, one's fundamental views and ideas can supply, will ever be present; the necessity for remaining oneself, for upholding one's own ideals, will ever spur one on a vigorous defense of those ideals.

Thus one would never grow old. Always stimulated, always on the defensive, one's brain would laugh at the passage of the years, would find it impossible, because of its activity, to collect clogging rust.

And think of the joy of living with someone who, day in, day out, will not, cannot, say, "Yes, dear, I quite agree; you are perfectly right." How terribly corroding it must be to experience daily acquiescence, however futile one's ideas!

They were later taken to the Boggs hotel.

New Way to Purify Water

Two scientists in Paris recently dropped a bottle containing chloride of lime in a vessel of impure water. The bottle was corked tightly so that its contents could not come in contact with the water. Yet 24 hours later, when the bottle was taken out, 25 per cent of the microbes in the water had been killed. An explanation advanced is that the antiseptic gives off rays that attack microbes, just as ultra-violet rays do, says Popular Science Monthly.

SOCIAL CALENDAR

Mrs. Mack Noggle was hostess to a shower and dinner bridge Monday evening honoring her sister, Mrs. William Poor, a recent bride. Mrs. Edmund Wanner, Mrs. Walter Shapter, of Columbus and Mrs. Frank Nickalno of Boston, Massachusetts, were out of town guests.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Pearce, of near Stoutsville, entertained to dinner Sunday, Mr. and Mrs. C. O. Pearce of Columbus; Mr. and Mrs. Abner McDonald, of Pickerington, Mr. Salem Pearce of Baltimore; Mr. and Mrs. Leroy McDonald and daughters, Mildred and Pauline, of Ashville; Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Pearce and daughters, Marvene and Catherine, and Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Pearce, of Stoutsville.

The Heffner reunion held at Orchard Island, Lewiston Reservoir, on Labor day was a very interesting event. Professor Heffner, of Greenfield, Pennsylvania, gave an interesting history of the Heffner families. The president not being present the meeting was conducted by Mr. W. Heffner, of Christianburg, Ohio. The next reunion will be held at Springfield, Ohio, on the second Saturday in August.

If the initial meeting is any criterion the coming year's work of the Monday club will be both entertaining and profitable.

The session Monday evening, September 14th, was opened by the retiring president, Mrs. G. G. Leist, who introduced the incoming presiding officer, Mrs. Carl Ritz. Mrs. Ritz opened the year's work with an inspiring talk on the aims and purposes of the club, harking back to its beginning, thirty-five years ago, and speaking of the high ideals of its founders. This address contained much food for thought and being listened to with apparent interest by all the members present, may become the nucleus around which much good work will be accomplished for the coming year.

Mrs. Louise Crawford, chairman of the program committee, then stated briefly the work of the committee in getting out the 1925-1926 calendar. She then called on the chairmen of the various sections, each to outline the prescribed study of her section.

The evening's subject, Current Events, was then taken up under the several topics: Current Events of the Past Summer, Mrs. Brown; In Exploration, Miss Phelps; In Mexico, Mrs. Bell; In the Artist World, Miss Littleton.

Mrs. E. W. Brinker, of Chicago, formerly Miss Mary O. Smith, a charter member of the club, was a visitor.

SHENANDOAH Airship Disaster

Scenes of wreck of U.S. Air Cruiser
in Pathe News

The fast work of the Pathe News in giving the world the screen views of the Shenandoah disaster is one of the most marvelous achievements in the history of the news camera. On the same day of the disaster pictures of the wrecked cruiser were shown in eastern cities.

So fast has been the development of camera work in giving the world its visual news that it may not be many years before the lens will be in a race with the printing press. Hardly an hour had elapsed after the news of the accident had been flashed by wire, when Pathe cameramen, driven in speed planes, were whirling away from Cleveland, Washington, Cincinnati and New York to the scene. One airplane was not entrusted with so important a mission, four were sent so that the film would get thru if disaster befell one or two of the planes.

Views of the fallen air cruiser and its surviving crew were filmed and the planes returned immediately with negatives which were developed at once and shipped to theaters over the country. So while newspaper extras were being rushed to the streets, the laboratory men were developing the film and hurrying copies to various theaters.

Scenes of the wreck of the Shenandoah will be shown tonight at the Met theater.

ROSH HASHANAH THE NEW YEARS OF ISRAELITES

Will be Observed by Believers of the Jewish Faith Saturday, Sept. 19.

High holiday services will be observed in Temple Israel, Columbus, New Year's evening at 8 o'clock, Friday, September 18, and New Year's morning at 10 o'clock, Saturday, September 19.

The day is known as Rosh Hashanah, which marks the beginning of the year, 5686, on the Hebrew calendar.

Orthodox Jews customarily observe two days, but the general observance extends from sunset Friday until sunset on Saturday. The event marks the anniversary of the creation, supposedly 5685 years ago.

It is set aside as a day of self-examination and introspection and is one of the holiest days in the religious calendar. The symbolical "blowing of the trumpet" simulates the arousing of the individual to a better life during the coming year than in the year preceding. The day of atonement, which follows on September 29, marks the real conclusion of the ceremony. The first holiday is for the purpose of judging oneself and the second for atoning and repenting for shortcomings and misdeeds, according to the religious custom.

OHIO FARM FAMILIES SPEND LESS

For School Advancement on the Average—Than Other Three States.

Columbus, Sept. 15. (UP). — Ohio farm families spend less for education and general advancement than three other widely separated states now being studied by the federal department of agriculture.

The report, just obtained by Ohio State university, compares Ohio with Connecticut, Alabama and Iowa.

"Most farm women attempt to stretch their housekeeping dollars as far as possible. Many farm families fail to get the quantity of vegetables and fruits that could be had from the farm at low cost compared with the market prices of these products, the report said.

"Savings are often possible thru more efficient use of fuel and household supplies. Sometimes waste in the use of the automobile and excessive operation costs can be lessened."

Expenditures for education and "advancement" are desirable, but money should not be spent without consideration merely because the purpose is regarded as educational or spiritual, the report continued.

The average annual expenditure of farm families in Ohio was found to be $1,540. Expenditure for advancement averaged $81 per family, or 5.4 per cent of the total value of goods consumed.

AFRICAN GOLF

A woman recently wished to dispose of a mah-jongg set of which she had grown tired, and asked a colored porter in her employ:

"Do you play mah-jongg?"

"What's that?"

"Oh, that's a game you play with little ivory blocks."

"Oh, yes, I play that," exclaimed the porter. "But why don't you say what you mean?"—Chelsea Record.

Ignorant of One Thing

Two friends were having an indignation meeting of their own. Both had suffered domestic strife and now they were comparing notes.

"Aren't women the limit?" growled the first. "We husbands don't know anything at all and our wives know everything."

"Well," said his companion in misery, reluctantly, "there's one thing my wife admits she doesn't know."

"What on earth is that?"

"Why she married me."

PICKAWAY CO. W. C. T. U. MEETS IN THIS CITY

Held in This City Last Week
Officers Elected for the Ensuing Year.

The 35th annual convention of the Pickaway county W. C. T. U. met at Circleville in the M. E. church on Friday, September 11. Mrs. Lucy B. Price president of the county presided. Song service was conducted by County Musical Director Mrs. Alma Boor.

Devotionals by Mrs. Mary S. Rife. Mrs. Lulu Marion, the newly elected president of Circleville Union, extended greetings and a cordial welcome to all. Miss Mary Harpster, of Salem Union, responded in behalf of the Unions.

Mrs. Adda Prushing, corresponding secretary read the report for the year, which showed gains in several departments. This being young people's and children's year, special effort was put forth to promote the work among them. Pickaway county feels proud of the fact that Miss Violet Ginder, of Darbyville, won the first state prize of $10, in the Scientific Temperance Essay contest.

Mrs. Bessie Long reported for the Young People's work.

Mrs. May Crites L. T. L. secretary gave a fine report of her work. She reported 119 children in the four L. T. L. organizations.

Mrs. Florence D. Richards, state president made the address and everyone was glad to have an opportunity of listening to her wonderful talk. Will only mention a few of the things she wanted us to remember. The slogan for this year being children's year is "Safeguard Our Future." "Mothers take your children to the meetings, talk to them, train them from infancy for prohibition and law enforcement. The saloons today cannot hurt men as they did in the past, but men hunt the liquor and every person elected to office should be men or women who will enforce our laws, and if they fail, report to the federal officers.

Women are no account unless they work, let each one have a vision and die in the harness.

Wanted — 1,000,000 children and good leaders to train them. "Save the children and we have saved the nation for the future."

The W. C. T. U. has a greater work to do now than ever before. They are going to keep on until every bootlegger has free transportation to Atlanta, Georgia.

A very touching memorial for our nine departed sisters was conducted by Miss Mary Porter.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Mrs. Lucy B. Price, Circleville; vice president, Miss Mary Porter, Circleville; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Adda Prushing, Ashville; treasurer, Mrs. Abbie Gussman, Circleville; recording secretary, Miss Drusie Heiskell. Miss Heiskell is a Crusader and she received 68 of the 70 votes cast.

The directors of the different departments gave their reports, each urged the Unions to get reports in early as possible.

Noontide prayer was voiced by Mrs. Mary Dunlap.

Box lunch, with ice cream and coffee was served by the Circleville Union at noon.

County executive meeting was held at 1 o'clock and directors of different departments selected.

Mrs. Elizabeth Wright conducted the devotionals. We were then favored with vocal solos by Mrs. Fannie Greeno and Mrs. Alma Boor. Thus ended a very successful convention and every woman went home filled with enthusiasm and with a determination to do more and better work during the coming year.

The congregation sang "Blest Be the Tie That Binds," followed by prayer by Rev. Mr. Johnson.

Water Power in Africa

If the world has final recourse in water power to the exclusion of other energy Africa will be the seat of empire. According to the best judgment of engineers, more than half of the potential energy of this old earth's water resources are lodged in the dark continent. There may yet be a cry of Africa for the Africans.—Los Angeles Times.

Old Town Advances

The oldest town on the North American mainland is Truxillo in Central America. It was discovered by Columbus in 1502 and now its historic streets are illuminated at night by modern electric street lighting units. Electricity is brought to Truxillo by a special 13,200-volt transmission line 12 miles long.

OPEN HEARINGS IS FAVORED BY THE PRESIDENT

Aircraft Investigation and
Inquiry Will Not be Held
Behind Closed Doors.

A policy of open hearings in the impending aircraft investigation in Washington, is favored by President Coolidge, who sees no reason why the work of his special board should not be conducted in public.

The president, who has decided to give the board a free hand in determining its procedure and summoning witnesses, feels that the public is entitled to full knowledge of its activities, except perhaps, when it goes into confidential plans for national defense.

Secretary Davis, of the war department Tuesday expressed the opinion that many persons were prone to accept at face value the charges of "incompetency and inefficiency" made by Colonel Mitchell, and that for this reason he welcomed the investigation.

Secretary Wilbur also took occasion Tuesday to reiterate his endorsement of the coming inquiry and express the willingness of the navy department to cooperate to the fullest extent. During the day, he received a call from Rear Admiral Frank F. Fletcher, retired, a member of the board, but neither gave any intimation of what was discussed.

The American Society for Promotion of Aviation, in a letter to the president Tuesday protested against the selection of Howard E. Coffin of Detroit, as a board member.

The communication, signed by Thomas L. Hill, president of the society, congratulated Coolidge upon naming the board, but said the "presence of one member, Howard E. Coffin will breed mistrust in the minds of the public, and to a great extent, defeat the purpose for which the board was created."

Senator King, of Utah, a Democratic member of the senate naval committee, also took cognizance of the board Tuesday, declaring its appointment was a "gesture" to stop efforts for an inquiry by congress, which he said would be carried thru at the approaching session.

Experts Would Make Cemetery Like Park

"A remarkable change is appearing in the cemeteries and on the memorial stones of America as a result of the efforts of memorial dealers to incorporate art in design," says Prof. W. H. Varnum of the department of applied arts in the University of Wisconsin.

"We are trying to get away from the lack of beauty of the older cemetery monument," says Professor Varnum, "by eliminating the unnatural looking granite blocks with heavy bases. Monument experts are trying to make cemeteries more like parks with memorials that harmonize with nature.

"Memorials in the future will be personalized. Line rather than elaborate floral design will characterize the deceased person. A successful scientist's memorial, for example, should be a slim obelisk, showing the successful termination of a strong life that has led in one direction."

Symbolic lines also would suggest the youth rather than an ornamental design which "slops over" in taste and sentiment. The youth's memorial would likely be tapered but not pointed, so as to suggest an abrupt ending of a young life. It would be of lighter material and with a small base.

A mausoleum, according to Professor Varnum, should be simple in line and set apart from the surrounding memorials so as to give it an adequate setting.

The overuse of elaborate floral design has been due, in part, he points out, to the process of sandblasting for enrichment of the plain stone. The process has been cheap and has therefore been used to excess. The former demand for huge blocks of granite has been due, in part, to the effort of dealers to give as much for the money as possible.

In many cemeteries now the authorities are formulating and enforcing regulations as to the design and size of memorials and causing their height to correspond to the immediate surrounding topography.

Cancer Investigation

A German scientist, Dr. A. Werschinski, has obtained results that seem to confirm the view that cancerous and tumorous growths are similar to embryonic tissue, in that they are simply masses of rapidly growing cells; but that they have "run wild" and escaped from the controls of normal growth. Doctor Werschinski injected finely minced embryonic kidney and adrenal tissue under the skin of a guinea pig, which subsequently developed characteristic tumorous growths in two different parts of its body.

Practically all the great countries of antiquity were deficient in natural supplies of iron. Consequently, most of the civilized people of early times had few tools, limited largely to knives, hoes and weapons.

Wants to See Action

"My greatest desire," said a Prairie avenue salesman, "is to see someone, some day, use a fire extinguisher. I've been going through the buildings of Detroit for many years and I've seen all sizes and shapes of extinguishers hanging in all possible positions. But never in all this time have I been fortunate enough to witness one in operation. I suppose they are used many times. Perhaps if I continue with my wish I may run into a slight blaze sometime that will give me my thrill. Even better, I may be able to satisfy a greater longing—that of yanking the extinguisher from its moorings and playing it on the blaze myself."—Detroit News.

Sea Deposits Coal

On the beach of Buckhaven in Fifeshire, Scotland, the sea piles up coal some two or three feet thick. From the town come men, women and children with buckets, boxes, bags and wheelbarrows to get the family supply. From the country come farmers on their horses with bags to get their share, according to the Kansas City Times.

The coal is actually mined by the sea. Ground swells break away the seams outcropping in the Firth of Forth and slowly carry the treasure to the shore.

In stormy weather the product greatly increases.

Making It Clear

Two elderly men, both extremely deaf, met on a country road. Dave had a fishing pole in his wagon. When he saw his friend Jim he stopped the horse.

"Goin' fishin'?" shouted Jim.

"No," Dave replied, "I'm goin' fish-in'."

"Oh," said Jim. "I thought mebbe you was goin' fishin'."—Country Gentleman.

AMUSEMENTS

Flapperism comes in for a sound spanking and jazz receives a knock-out blow in Paramount's "Code of the West," which Lucien Hubbard adapted and William K. Howard produced from the Zane Grey novel of the same name.

The direct and drastic methods of the west were never better illustrated than in this absorbing photoplay in which a sturdy son of Arizona teaches a flapper daughter of New York the a-b-c of living and loving.

Pictured against marvelous natural backgrounds and abounding in breath-taking thrills, "Code of the West" unfolds its vivid, appealing story of the romance of Georgie May Stockwell, a frivolous little flapper, and Cal Thurman, a sturdy, virile cowboy.

The young westerner, unused to the ways of the east, falls an easy victim to the charms of Georgie, who flirts outrageously with him but laughs at him when he proposes to her. The realization that she has only been playing with him infuriates Cal and he forces her to marry him.

This is the beginning of an unusual series of events that reach a terrific climax during the height of a roaring forest fire. The manner in which Georgie and Cal escape paving the way to their ultimate reunion provides several mighty thrills and some great dramatic moments.

Owen Moore has the strong role of the cowboy caveman, and Constance Bennett gives a good account of herself as the flighty, fiery flapper. Others in the cast are Mabel Ballin, Charles Ogle and David Butler.

Ireland and Egypt

The term "Dominion" is applied generally to the self-governing British possessions beyond the seas, although the word does not in all cases form part of their names. In the case of Canada the word is part of the name, but such is not the case, for instance, of the Union of South Africa, or the Commonwealth of Australia, nor is it the case of the Irish Free State, and yet they may all be referred to as dominions. On November 18, 1914, a British protectorate was declared over Egypt, and the khedive assumed the title of sultan. In March, 1922, Egypt was declared to be an independent kingdom.

A System of Farming That Brings Health and Prosperity

Every farm, regardless of the method of farming practiced or of the crops raised, should have at least a few good milch cows to provide

- (1) Enough milk, cream and butter for home use;
- (2) Enough skim-milk to raise some calves, pigs and chickens;
- (3) Enough cream or butter to sell to pay, in part or entirely, current living expenses.

This plan has been a "life-saver" for thousands of farmers, especially during the hard times of the past two years. It insures a living, at least, and often other income besides.

Such a plan pays best with a De Laval Cream Separator. It soon pays for itself—and skims cleaner, lasts longer and is easier to operate and clean than any other.

A Scotchman's Conscience

The purchasing agent of a big jobbing concern in San Francisco is a Scotchman. He gave an extensive order—indeed, the total ran into many thousands of dollars—to a salesman for a supply house. Although he had obtained the business in open competition, and by virtue of the excellence of his wares and the low figures he quoted, the salesman felt gratitude at being favored and sought a way to show it.

He knew he dare not offer the Scotchman a commission; likewise a gift of money, he figured, would be regarded as an insult. He had an inspiration. The Scotchman, he noticed, constantly smoked cigars. So the salesman excused himself for a minute, slipped out to a cigar store and bought a box containing fifty of the finest Havanas the tobacconist carried in stock. The price for the fifty was fifteen dollars. He brought the box back under his arm and asked the purchasing agent to accept it with his compliments.

The latter drew back. He explained that it was against the policy of his house for its buyers to accept presents of any sort from those with whom the concern did business. He was sorry, he said, but he could not take the cigars as a present, even though he felt sure his young friend had tendered them with the best of intentions and in absolute good faith.

The salesman had another idea: "Well, he said, 'I hate to throw these cigars away. They are of no use to me—I smoke only cigarettes. I wonder if you would buy them from me?—there's no harm in that, I'm sure.'"

"What would you be asking for them, laddy?" inquired the prudent Scotchman.

"I'll sell the whole fifty to you for a nickel," stated the salesman. The purchasing agent lifted one of the cigars from the top row, smelled it, rolled it in his fingers and eyed it closely.

"Very well," he said, "at that price I'll take four boxes." (Copyright by the Central Press Association.)

All According to Specifications

"Now then, children," said the Sunday school teacher, in her best Sunday school teacher's manner, "the lesson for today is about the Prophet Elisha. Can any little boy or little girl here tell us anything about Elisha?"

"Me," answered a ten-year-old urchin, holding up his hand. "I can tell about him."

"Very well, then, Eddie," answered the teacher. "Now, then, all the rest of you be nice and quiet while Eddie tells us about the Prophet Elisha."

"Well," said Eddie, "Elisha was an old bald-headed preacher. One day he was goin' along the big road and he came past where some children were playin' in the sand, and they laughed at him and poked fun at him and called him names and hollered, 'Oh, look at that old bald-headed man!' That made Elisha hoppin' mad and he stopped and turned around and shook his fist at 'em and he said, 'Don't you kids make fun of me any more! If you do I'll call some bears out of them woods yonder and they'll shore eat you up.'"

"And they did and he did and the bears did." (Copyright by the McNaught Syndicate, Inc.)

He Lacked Storage Space

Congressman John K. Hendrick of Kentucky, now deceased, was notoriously soft hearted. He was sitting in a courtroom one day when a young and struggling member of the local bar, who was not especially renowned for mental brilliancy, undertook to read a petition in a divorce suit and speedily got himself badly tangled up in a confused maze of legal phrases. The judge undertook to set the young lawyer right, but the only result was to tangle him worse than ever. The judge was showing signs of losing his temper when Colonel Hendrick arose.

"I hope, your honor," he said, in his courtly speaking voice, "that you will bear patiently with our young friend here. He is doing his best."

"I know that, Colonel Hendrick," said the judge, somewhat testily, "and I intend to bear patiently with him. I am merely trying to give Mr. So-and-So an idea."

"Your honor," said Colonel Hendrick, "don't do it. He's got no place to put it." (Copyright by the Central Press Association.)

Not This One: The Other One

There formerly were two Coveleskie brothers playing in the big leagues. One day Harry Coveleskie was pitching a game for Detroit against the Yankees at the Polo grounds in New York. As Damon Runyon sat in the press stand an attendant handed him a note which had been sent by one of a group of spectators in a grandstand box.

The note ran as follows:

"To settle a bet, please state which one of the Coveleskie boys this fellow is?"

Runyon turned the note over and made his answer on the reverse side of it.

"This," he wrote, "is the other one!" (Copyright by the McNaught Syndicate, Inc.)

REGULAR MEETING

At the regular meeting of the American Legion Auxiliary held at the residence of the president, Mrs. A. A. Parrett, last evening, a small but very appreciative and enthusiastic audience listened to the report of the president who as a delegate from the local Post attended the State convention which was held in Chillicothe on August 23 to 25.

The report was very interesting and a complete description of the activities of herself and the other delegate, Mrs. B. T. Hedges, from the time of their arrival until the closing session of the convention was given. At the conclusion of the report, a rising vote of thanks was given Mrs. Parrett for her complete report.

A letter from the local chapter of the American Red Cross which had been given the Legion for the comfort bags for the soldiers in the hospitals and which was given to the auxiliary to ask their assistance in making, was read and it was decided that next Monday evening a sewing would be held at the residence of Mrs. E. E. Prose to complete these bags.

There was quite a number of other matters discussed and business arranged among other things a letter was ordered written to the committee in charge of decorating of the Post room and an offer made which the committee can hardly fail to overlook.

It is to be hoped that at the next meeting of the Auxiliary more members will be present as the time was thoroughly enjoyed by those attending.

JOHN J. RENICK FARMS WERE RE-SOLD MONDAY

James W. Andrix, of Duvall, purchased the 199 acre tract at his bid of $71.75.

Alva Delong, of near Stoutsville, purchased the 90 acre tract at his bid of $62.00 an acre.

The sale attracted a goodly number of bidders.

This sale netted the estate $3,300 more than the first sale.

What Makes Grapes "Wild"?

Robert, the young son of Sheriff Burns of Petersburg, was present during a conversation between his mother and some friends, who were discussing the merits of the wild grape for pies, jelly, etc. With a puzzled expression on his face, he said:

"Mom, what kind of grapes are wild grapes?"

Mother Burns explained to him that wild grapes grew in the woods and were much smaller than "tame" grapes, whereupon Robert again asked:

"Will the wild grapes run away from you when you go after them, and will the tame grapes come to you when you call them?"

It was then that mother realized how utterly futile her attempts to make clear to her son why the wild grape was called "wild."—Indianapolis News

Why He Likes Knickers

"I've finally decided that knickers are a practical garment for men," declared a golfer. "I wore an old pair today and just before I started out I bought several new balls, tendered a bill in payment and received some silver in change. This I thrust into my pocket. There happened to be a hole in this pocket and when I came in I reached down for the change. It was gone. Now, if I had been wearing long trousers I'd have lost that money. But, since I wore socks outside my knickers, all I had to do was to search the proper sock. And there was my money. That's why I'm so certain that knickers are a very practical garment."
